REPORT IN FULL ON LAW SURVEY SEEN BY JULY 1

General Statement Is to Follow Agreement on Dry Phase.

GROUP WILL NOT ASK NEW APPROPRIATION

Enforcement Machinery Is Found Inadequate by Wickersham Body.

(Associated Press.)

With their prohibition problem virtually solved, members of the Wickersham Law Enforcement Commission went further yesterday and predicted that almost all their entire study of the Nation's criminal law enforcement machinery, held by them "entirely inadequate," can be completed by July 1.

The few members in the Capital yesterday were chary of expressing opinions upon information that a majority of their number are now prepared to recommend a further strengthening of prohibition enforcement, rather than any relaxation of the dry laws.

Word came from high official sources Saturday that a tentative prohibition report, agreeable to a majority, has been completed. It was described as suggesting no measures for repeal or modification to permit wine or beer.

Discuss Other Phases.

The law enforcement commissioners had less hesitancy, however, in discussing other phases of their voluminous task. Under present plans no request will be made for further congressional appropriation to finance the crime study, instituted May 28, 1930.

With the exception of the investigation of juvenile delinquency and of conditions in the courts, all of the eleven crime reports the commission has planned are expected to be completed. They will include recommendations on the Nation's police work, methods of prosecution and penal institutions, as well as studies of the cost and cause of crime, crime among the foreign born and abuses in law enforcement.

Machinery Overtaxed.

After a preliminary survey of these fields some time ago the commission authorized a statement that it had been "demonstrated unquestionably that the criminal law enforcement machinery of the country is entirely inadequate; that prohibition, automobile theft, white slave traffic, immigration and other criminal laws of the Federal Government have overtaxed the capacity and effectiveness of the national machinery for enforcement."

Considerable speculation had been aroused as to whether the commission would seek further funds to complete its work. The assurance given yesterday was that experts had been at work all the time the commission was studying prohibition, and that the funds voted by Congress to run them up until July 1 would be sufficient.

The expenses of the continuing juvenile delinquency investigation are being financed outside of commission funds, while much of the work on court conditions is being done by a committee appointed from various prominent law schools.

Deal With Congestion.

In regard to its prohibition report, word has come from within the commission ranks that further mention will be made of court congestion, as it relates to dry law enforcement. It was recalled, however, that this subject was dealt with, and several recommendations made in the preliminary report last January.

Although word has come from sources believed authoritative that a majority of the commission now favors a dry report, it could not be ascertained whether a minority report would be submitted, or whether the dissenting members would confine their objections and possible recommendations to the individual opinions to be written by each commissioner.

Snowslide in Alps Kills 6 Frenchmen

Cotton Manufacturer and His Two Sons Are Among Victims.

Briancon, France, Jan. 4 (A.P.).—Six Frenchmen died today as they were engulfed by an avalanche in a pass of the Alps Mountains along the Franco-Italian frontier.

They had dined at a hotel on the Italian side and were going home when a snowslide estimated at from 25 to 30 feet high crashed down and buried them. One hundred soldiers from Briancon were called to recover the bodies.

Among the victims were Theodore Webaux, prominent cotton manufacturer of Roubaix, and his two sons. Another was Henri Bousquet, a member of the French council of state.

Gen. Wood Enters Medical School Shy Boy, But Leaves It Self-Assertive Physician

By HERMANN HAGEDORN.

CHAPTER II.

Leonard Wood and his mother faced together the bleak spaces of a new and appalling world. Apart from the bitterness of personal loss, the practical problems were grave.

The doctor had left nothing except the house and a mass of accounts largely uncollectible, but a wealthy friend of the family, H. H. Hunnewell, of Wellesley, advanced the funds to continue Leonard's education. So, late in September Leonard Wood, a week short of 20, was out in the world on his own, matriculating at the Harvard Medical School.

For a young man, brought up in an eddy remote from the main current, he was singularly fitted to breast open waters. In his father's easygoing household, free alike from compulsion and indulgence, an individuality could expand and grow strong. Mrs. Wood was able to see him depart for the city without apprehensions as to his ability to take care of himself. Wind and sun, labor and peril had toughened his physical fiber; duty, adventure, sorrow, self-reliance, had sharpened a spirit to which his mother and his father alike had in his conception contributed courage, honor and strength.

Blue waters and windswept moors had had their part in his building; and a hundred weather-beaten men and women had silently and unconsciously instructed him. They were hard-working, thrifty, adventurous, law-abiding—these neighbors of his; kindly, laconic, realistic, narrow in religion, narrow in politics; conservative, provincial, distrusting Democrats and foreigners; caring little for money, prizing above everything else character—integrity, steady judgment, courage, decency. Leonard Wood had been so much a part of them that their virtues and their limitations became to a large extent his virtues and his limitations, too. When he entered the massive brick building of the Harvard Medical School on North Grove street, Boston, he carried Cape Cod with him.

He carried it obviously for all to see. An observant young man standing with 20 others of his own age on the double stairs that met at the entrance door, looked at him and looked again, fascinated by the tow-colored mop which crowned the ungainly figure. It had clearly known no shears for months and had the peculiar dryness of hair burnt by the sun and whipped by the wind. He had apparently made little effort to comb or brush it; any such effort would in any event have been futile.

The hair seemed a symbol as well as a crown for the creature beneath it. He was large and obviously strong though the shy look in the blue eyes gave him at first glance an appearance of girlishness in spite of promi-

POPE TO FORCE ADHERENCE TO NUPTIAL RULES

Encyclical Will Revert to Basic and Most Rigid Church Principles.

MARRIAGE OF BORIS LINKED TO SITUATION

Letter to Turn on Modern Trend; Birth Control Is Also Discussed.

Rome, Jan. 4 (A.P.).—Reiteration of the strict Catholic doctrine on marriage is expected in the encyclical Pope Pius will issue this week.

Far from making concessions to modernistic trends, it is understood the encyclical will hark back to the first principles of the church—restating Catholicism's utter disapproval of divorce and emphasizing the doctrine that only by continence within the married state can families be limited without transgressing the divine law.

This restatement, it was generally assumed today, would be the Pope's answer to the Anglican bishops' qualified admission of birth control in certain cases, emanating from the Lambeth conference in London last summer.

To Discuss Mixed Marriages.

Mixed marriages, those between Catholics and non-Catholics, also are expected to get special comment. It is taken for granted the Pope will reemphasize that bishops, before granting dispensations for such unions, must extract a written promise from the non-Catholic that all children born of the marriage must be brought up in the Catholic faith and that the non-Catholic party will in no way interfere with the Catholic party's fulfillment of religious duties. At the same time, the duty of the Catholic party to pray unceasingly for conversion of the non-Catholic spouse and, by force of example in piety of life, induce such conversion is expected to be published anew.

Linked With Boris' Wedding.

Although both parties to that royal match gave the Pope written pledges on the foregoing points, the orthodox Bulgarian clergy tried to make it appear that the second ceremony at Sofia was the binding one, whereas the pontiff had been assured it would be merely in the nature of a civic rite, registering the marriage contracted at Assisi.

The president of the Bulgarian Orthodox Synod, in a speech to the newly weds in the Sofia Cathedral, congratulated Boris on "founding a real orthodox dynasty."

After issuance of the Pope's encyclical, it is believed the contracting of mixed marriages, both among royalties and common folk, will be more difficult. It is taken for granted that in the future parish priests, in the first instance, and bishops, in the second, will be held to a strict accountability in exacting the guarantees the church requires.

Banns to Come Up Also.

With this there is expected to come also a tightening of regulations on publication of banns, which normally must be read to congregations in the home parishes on the two Sundays immediately before the marriage. One object of this would be to prevent cases of "Marry in haste and repent at leisure."

Members of the clergy, it is understood, also will be ordered to scrutinize with extra care all proposed marriages between Catholics and non-

PRINCESS LOUISE.

PRINCESS ROYAL DIES SUDDENLY IN LONDON

LIFE MOSTLY TRANQUIL

London, Jan. 4 (A.P.).—The Princess Royal, eldest sister of King George, died this afternoon at the age of 63.

Though she was known to have been an invalid for many years, the first intimation to reach the public that her condition had become critical was in the form of a bulletin issued early today from her residence in Portman Square, saying she was showing signs of increasing weakness.

This bulletin was followed in a few hours by the announcement that she had died suddenly in her sleep in the presence of her daughters, Princess Arthur of Connaught and Lady Maude Carnegie.

Though Princess Louise Victoria Alexandra Dagmar—to give her full name—was of such a retiring disposition she sometimes was called the "royal shyness" she was greatly loved by all who got to know her.

She was the most democratic of royal ladies and on many occasions took rides in buses, the other occupants of which were ignorant that the quietly dressed, middle-aged woman sitting among them was a sister of the king. She took a keen interest in the theater and was personally acquainted with many actors, actresses and playwrights.

Until recent years she frequently was to be seen at performances which she attended with the same complete absence of ceremony that she did everything else.

Her life, for the most part, was tranquil and uneventful yet it contained at least one real romance and one big adventure.

The romance was her marriage at the age of 22 to the Earl of MacDuff—a marriage, which it is declared was carried out in the face of considerable opposition from Queen Victoria, who objected to the idea that a member of the royal family should marry a commoner. The marriage however, proved ideally happy and the earl, whose elevation to the dignity of Duke of Fife was announced at the wedding breakfast, soon became a great favorite of the whole royal family.

The adventure was when the liner Delhi, carrying the princess and her husband to Egypt, was wrecked at night in a furious gale on the rocks near Cape Spartel, 10 miles from Tangier. The princess and her husband reached land with great difficulty and afterward had to remain some hours in a torrential rain on the rocky coast before help arrived.

POLICE TO LAY LANGDON CASE BEFORE ROVER

ATTORNEY PREDICTS HIS EARLY RELEASE

Adverse Report on Gun Test Baffles Inquiry as New Leads Are Sought.

Evidence concerning Patrolman Robert F. Langdon, unearthed by police in their investigation of the murder of Beulah Limerick, will be presented to United States Attorney Leo Rover this morning, Inspector William Shelby said yesterday.

When Lieut. John Fowler, ballistics expert, submitted his report Saturday night, the police case against Langdon virtually exploded, as it was determined that neither of the two .38-caliber automatics taken from the policeman fired the two shells found in the murder house.

Inspector Shelby expressed the opinion that a fight in which the girl was involved preceded the murder, giving as his reason the evidence of a cut on her nose and a bruise on her left wrist. He said he was dissatisfied with the stories of Vernon Limerick, Richard Reed and William Paddy, and said they would be further questioned in the hope that evidence supporting the fight theory would develop.

No Powder Traces Found.

Examination of the spread and the blanket, which covered the girl and in which bullet holes were found, showed no traces of powder or powder burns. This establishes that the shots were fired from a distance greater than 4 or 5 feet, police say.

Tests will be made, police say, to determine if it is possible to see the head of the bed, on which Beulah Limerick lay, by looking through the narrow slit between the shade and side of the window in the basement door with the aid of a flashlight. This will be done in order to check Langdon's statement that he saw that portion of the bed when he looked in on the morning of the murder.

The girl was buried Saturday at Potomac Mills, Va., where she lived before coming to Washington several years ago; and, strangely, 4 miles away in Oak Grove Cemetery, rests the body of Mary E. Baker, whose brutal murder last April remains unsolved.

Attorney Visits Langdon.

Langdon was visited by his attorney, Harry T. Whelan, yesterday morning at the Twelfth Precinct police station. At the conclusion of their conference Mr. Whelan stated that he was convinced of his client's innocence and said that no steps would be taken to secure his release, for he believes, he said, that Landon will be released soon without it being necessary for legal proceedings to be taken.

Whalen said Langdon realizes the seriousness of the murder and wishes that police have every opportunity to investigate. He said Langdon expressed willingness to stay in confinement as long as police wished to investigate.

Police said they made a further search of Langdon's home Saturday afternoon, but were unsuccessful in finding any other gun which might have fired the fatal shot.

Meanwhile, the homicide squad continued their efforts to secure a new lead toward solving the enigmatic crime, but there have been no developments, according to Capt. Edward J. Kelly.

Brother Sticks to Story.

Vernon Limerick, the girl's brother, who found the body when he came downstairs Wednesday morning, was subjected to questioning, lasting two hours, yesterday afternoon, by Detective Sergt. John Flaherty. Flaherty said that his story remained unchanged.

Capt. Kelly yesterday afternoon went over the girl's diary, which was found in the house, with her sister, Mrs. Julia Bywater, in an attempt to secure the names and identities of

M'KELVIE REQUESTS NORRIS FUNDS QUIZ

DESCRIBES PROPAGANDA

(Associated Press.)

Samuel R. McKelvie, a member of the Farm Board, yesterday renewed his request that the Senate campaign funds committee investigate activities and expenditures in behalf of the reelection of Senator Norris, of Nebraska, as well as efforts to defeat him.

In a letter to Chairman Nye, of the Senate committee, McKelvie, a former governor of Nebraska, said he had been informed that "hundreds of thousands" of copies of a certain publication were sent into Nebraska in the interest of the Republican independent leader and that campaign workers from outside the State went to Lincoln and urged Democrats to enter the Republican primaries "thus violating the spirit and purpose of the law."

"Considering the amount of time your operatives have spent in Nebraska," McKelvie wrote, "these facts must be well-known to them or can be easily secured."

McKelvie testified before the Nye committee recently that he contributed $10,000 to the campaign fund of Norris' primary opponent, but that only $2,800 of it was spent for that purpose. His request yesterday was made as the committee prepared to resume its inquiry tomorrow into efforts to defeat Norris. At that time Robert H. Lucas, executive director, and Joseph E. Nutt, treasurer of the Republican national committee, are to testify. They will be questioned

Leaders Are Hopeful As Congress Gathers

(Associated Press.)

Congress reassembles today facing a host of new controversies, but leaders were hopeful last night that the calendar of business could be completed in the remaining two months of this session without the necessity of an extra meeting after March 4.

Anxious Senate chieftains believed one of the worries facing them—the World Court issue—would be definitely eliminated during the week by assurance from President Hoover that he was willing to accept the decision of the Republicans of the foreign relations committee to defer this subject until the regular session next December.

Relief measures and the vital appropriation bills carrying the funds for next year's operating expenses of the Government will command first attention.

Appropriation of the $45,000,000 authorized by Congress just before the holidays for loans to drought stricken farmers to aid in planting this year's crops will be taken up immediately in both the House and the Senate.

Tomorrow the Senate appropriations committee will open an independent inquiry into the unemployment and drought situations ordered by the Senate in adopting the resolution of Senator La Follette (Republican), Wisconsin. On the basis of this study is expected to hinge the fate of relief legislation in addition to the program recommended by President Hoover, which has already been enacted.

House leaders are prepared to get the appropriation bills before the Senate by the end of the month. None of these measures has so far gotten through the Senate. Enactment is necessary to avoid an extra session.

The House also is facing a struggle over the proposal to permit cash payments to World War veterans on their bonus insurance certificates. Representative Patman (Democrat), Texas, predicted yesterday that his petition to discharge the ways and means committee from consideration of his bill for cash payments would soon have the necessary 218 signatures to get the measure before the House.

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), Montana, issued a statement urging that the administration support the bill of Representative Holaday (Republican), Illinois, for a $5,000,000,000 bond issue, to be spent in public roads construction.

In the Senate, leaders anticipate an outbreak of debate over the proposed consolidation of the Eastern railroads into four units. An attempt also is expected to reconsider the nominations of the power commissioners as a result of their dismissal of some of the employes of the old commission. Word that the reorganized commission is opening the doors for the old members to file for reemployment may temper this row.

On Friday the Senate will begin consideration of the nominees to the reorganized Tariff Commission. Contests face at least two of the six—Edgar Brossard, of Utah, a Republican, and Alfred P. Dennis, of Maryland, a Democrat. The Senate also will consider the nomination of

POLICE FIGHT MOB RIOTING AT CHURCH

TEN MEN ARE ARRESTED

Chicago, Jan. 4 (A.P.).—Resisting removal of their pastor, the Rev. Edward Kowalewski, several hundred parishioners of St. Mary Magdelene's Catholic Church battled with police today before early morning mass.

A riot squad detail of 125 officers finally dispersed the crowd after clubbing leaders into submission. Ten men were arrested on disorderly conduct charges.

The disturbance began about 4 o'clock. Several hundred persons surrounded the church. A bonfire was lighted and a number of youths climbed through windows of the church and set the bells to ringing.

Police who had been assigned to the neighborhood in anticipation of trouble were unable to handle the situation and the special detail was called out.

Wielding clubs, the riot squad charged into the throng and finally restored order. Police said some of the men arrested were hoodlums and were not affilated with the church.

After the streets were cleared the Rev. Peter Bona, pastor of a neighboring Catholic church, said mass under a heavy police guard. He bitterly denounced the demonstrators for resisti-

New Start Upon Ocean Hop Planned by Aviators Today

Plane in "Pay Load" Flight Reconditioned at Norfolk After Saturday Failure for Trip to Paris by Way of Bermuda, Azores.

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 4 (A.P.).—Undaunted by a series of mishaps which spelled failure in their first attempt, Mrs. Beryl Hart and Lieut. William S. MacLaren tonight made ready to resume the first "pay load" flight to Europe at 6 o'clock tomorrow.

With their monoplane Tradewind thoroughly conditioned by Navy officers and mechanics, and their sextant repaired, the fliers were confident they would have no difficulty in landing tomorrow on the tiny island of Bermuda, the first refueling stop, which they were unable to locate yesterday in a heavy mist.

Both fliers were up at 10 o'clock, with the Tradewind as their first thought. The big monoplane was resting easily on the waters of Hampton Roads, where they brought it down yesterday after a sixteen-hour flight from New York in a vain effort to locate Bermuda.

"I figure we missed Bermuda by some 50 miles to the west, but that is just plain guesswork," Lieut. MacLaren told Navy officers. "The wind hit us when we turned, and I figured it had carried us that much off our course." Both fliers believed they would have reached Bermuda, even after breaking their sextant shortly after leaving New York, except for the mist which made the "ceiling" in the vicinity of the island something like 400 feet above the sea.

Lieut. E. C. Ewuen, Navy flier, went to Annapolis for a new lens for the fliers' sextant, and Lieut. MacLaren, accompanied by Lieut. C. C. Champion, of the naval base here, took the Tradewind up for a test flight.

Calvin Coolidge Says:

Thousands of our citizens and about one twenty-fifth of our national wealth are in foreign countries. For many generations international law has recognized that a government has an interest in its citizens and their property and is under a moral duty to protect them wherever they are. Otherwise a country could be seriously crippled by the destruction of property of its citizens themselves when they are abroad. These duties and interests require any government to protect its citizens and their property in the enjoyment of their rights under international law when they are on foreign soil. It is not a voluntary action but a binding duty imposed by international law and is common to all nations. Sending marine forces for this purpose is not regarded as war.

Our Government does not like to do this and avoids it when possible. But if we failed to do it in Central America, European governments would send their forces there to protect their corresponding interests. Our forces are not in any country because we want them there. They are there because of our obligation under international law. The observance and enforcement of such law is the best guarantee of order and peace.

Fire Reveals Elaborate Still Opposite Church in Detroit

Detroit, Jan. 4 (A.P.).—Worshipers on their way to church for Sunday morning services today saw Federal prohibition agents seize the largest alcohol cooking plant ever discovered in the Detroit area.

The plant occupied an entire five-story building in the heart of the uptown church district.

Worshipers gathering at the Metropolitan Methodist Episcopal Church noticed smoke issuing from the building across the street, and called firemen. Thomas H. Brennan, deputy administrator for Michigan in charge of prohibition enforcement for the Department of Justice, was summoned by the fire fighters after they had forced their way into the place and ascertained what it was.

Brennan said the plant was the most modern, elaborate cooking plant he ever had seen. He estimated its output at 10,000 gallons of alcohol a day, and the value $50,000, at market prices. He said the equipment probably cost $250,000.

No one was found in the building, but Brennan said from 50 to 100 men would be required to operate the plant. Large supplies of raw materials lay about. Firemen said the blaze was caused by a short circuit and that little damage was done.

The president of the Leonard-Detroit Storage Co., which formerly owned the building, said it was sold fou. months ago to a "Mr. Roberts," who said he was buying it for a factory to "manufacture special parts for automobiles."

the victim's friends mentioned by nickname therein. Some progress was made, he said, and the persons whose names he found will be questioned in the hope that a clew will develop.

Police admit the case is at a standstill. They say they will continue to hold Langdon, Vernon Limerick, Richard Reed, roomer at the fatal house, who left for his work at 5:30 o'clock on the morning of the murder, and William Edward Paddy, who escorted the girl to a dance on Tuesday night and left her at her home about 1 o'clock Wednesday morning.

YOUTH, 22, CALLED 'THREE-GUN BANDIT'

CONFESSION IS ALLEGED

New York, Jan. 4 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Two detectives, far from their Brooklyn beat, walked into a Harlem cabaret early today and when they left a husky, suavely tailored youth of 22 went with them. Some hours later, when they had searched his furnished room in Hoboken, N. J., and had uncovered a whole arsenal of weapons, they charged him with eight holdups and a burglary, and announced that they had captured Brooklyn's "three-gun" bandit who, since October, has terrorized the borough's grocers, with profit to himself of some $3,000.

He confessed the crimes, they said, and then added, "It's a good thing you took me when I wasn't looking. I always said I'd kill a cop before I was arrested."

Thomas Walden is the young man's name. Until four months ago he was a clerk in a chain grocery store and his conduct, his employers said, would have graced a Sunday school.

But since last August, when he quit work suddenly, giving no reason, he has collected, the detectives learned when they went through his quarters in Hoboken, three pistols which he habitually carried—one a blue steel .45 they found in his possession, one a vest-pocket automatic, and a police style .38 revolver.

In his bedroom they found 60 rounds of ammunition for the three guns, a wooden club, a blackjack, two daggers and two pairs of handcuffs. The proceeds of his exploits he carried, mostly, on his back. He wore a pin-tripe, blue, expensive suit, a thumb-nail size pearl stickpin, a well-cut Chesterfield coat and spats.

In his room they found a well-stocked wardrobe. Nicht clugs, he said, he patronized extensively, and life of ease and affluence was his object when he left his obscure clerkship for a venture as a bad man.

"I thought it was an easy way to make a living," he explained. "I guess I was crazy. I wish you'd take me out and put a bullet into me."

ROOSEVELT IS GIVEN POWER PLANT PLAN

CANADIAN IDEA DIFFERS

Albany, N. Y., Jan. 4 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—Plans for a dam to develop about 2,000,000 horsepower in electricity from the St. Lawrence River, at a cost of $171,000,000, have been presented to Gov. Roosevelt's St. Lawrence Power Development Commission by its engineering board. The plans differ in important respects from those offered by Canadian engineers, who recommended two dams, involving greater expenditure.

The commission's engineering board, headed by Lieut. Gen. Edgar Jadwin, retired, former chief of Army engineers, in a report made public today, summarized the plan as follows:

Construction of a power plant at Massena Point, N. Y., to develop 2,000,000 horsepower, in the international rapids section of the river.

Serious construction hazards eliminated by building powerhouses and spillway on what is now dry land, and by avoiding deep river cofferdams.

Plant to be built in two steps, to flood less than former plans, thus meeting Canadian objections to the single-dam plan as compared to the two-dam plan.

Total cost to be $171,000,000, or $70,000,000 less than the proposed double-stage plan—coordinate power and navigation, producing more power and requiring less time than any other plan.

By building the dam to give a head of 50 feet, 600,000 horsepower may be developed at an estimated cost of $80,000,000, or $133 per horsepower. By raising the dam later, at an additional cost of $90,000,000, the full head of 85 feet may be utilized for development of 2,000,000 horsepower, at a construction cost of $77.97 per horsepower.

Australia Police Use U. S. Plan on Drug Ring

Chief trophy of the Sydney police is Kate Lee, recognized "queen of the underworld." With her arrest local police officials believe that the power of the ring has been broken.

She was considered the chief force in building up the Australian dope ring until it became a social menace. But not until Detective Inspector Mackay had visited the United States and brought back new ideas in crime detection was she "caught with the goods."

Chromosomes Named By Absorbing Colors

Pasadena, Calif., Jan. 4 (A.P.).—Chromosomes, tiny, sausage-shaped bodies in the nuclei of all living cells, obtained their name from their property of absorbing readily the colors of certain dyes. At first this color-loving material, chromatin, was believed to be responsible for heredity.

But lately, says Dr. Calvin B. Bridges, of the California Institute of Technology, geneticists have come to doubt this.

The color absorbent probably is merely a product of the real and as yet invisible character-producing agents, which are called genes. These surround themselves with this chromatin jelly.

CARAWAY DEMANDS NEW DROUGHT HELP

(Associated Press.)

Describing Red Cross relief as inadequate, Senator Caraway (Democrat), Arkansas, announced yesterday he would introduce a bill to appropriate $15,000,000 for food loans to drought stricken farmers.

The senator planned this action for today after hearing that a number of hungry persons had stormed the business section of England, Ark., in a demand for food.

Manwhile, the National Red Cross announced it was prepared to take care of the situation at England and that every one entitled to relief had been fed.

"It is perfectly certain that the Red Cross has the funds and the ability and the organization to take care of the situation. Judge Payne advised me the Red Cross would handle the matter and adequate relief would be tendered."

Relief Called Adequate.

"I am reporting herewith that the England, Ark., situation is well in hand with the Red Cross extending relief, fully supported by municipal officials and community leaders. All needy applicants entitled to relief received relief by 7 p. m. tonight (Saturday) in an orderly, systematic manner.

"Disturbance was caused by about 300 men from one section of the county (Lonoke) causing only temporary excitement, with no damage to property or persons."

Dewitt Smith, assistant director of domestic operations, said the Red Cross "was prepared to take care of any such situation," adding that the organization already had advanced funds to farmers in Lonoke County.

Reports of the food disturbance came as the House planned to begin consideration today of the $45,000,000 appropriation for drought relief which was authorized before the Christmas recess. None of this amount, however, is to be loaned for food under a policy outlined by Secretary Hyde.

Would Increase Fund.

Senator Caraway said his bill would provide for an increase in the drought fund to $60,000,000, the added $15,000,000 to go for food. This provision was stricken out of the drought relief authorization bill after the Senate had inserted it.

"There has got to be more relief," Caraway said, adding that the Red Cross' activities were inadequate.

"While the people are grateful for the Red Cross relief," he added, "it is wholly inadequate. It has reached the people in the towns and near the towns, but the most abject cases are in the country. The allocation of funds by the Red Cross is such that no human being can survive on them."

Farmers near England, Ark., Caraway said, once were prosperous. He added if conditions are bad there, "you can imagine how much worse they are in less favorable localities."

Representative Blanton (Democrat), Texas, issued a statement assailing the policy of the Federal Land Bank in not granting extensions of loans, while Representative Tilson, of Connecticut, the majority floor leader, said:

"In making available $45,000,000 of public funds for loans to farmers, Congress is making it possible for the afflicted farmers to proceed with the planting of their spring crops through furnishing money for fertilizer, seed and feed as well as fuel for farm machinery. In addition, provision is made for the taking care of feed for cattle and other live stock during the winter months."

Ample Relief at England Promised by Red Cross

England, Ark., Jan. 4 (A.P.).—Drought-impoverished farmers of these once fertile Arkansas River bottoms, 300 or more of whom yesterday descended on this village in search of food, were assured by local Red Cross officials today they would be fed.

Coming to town in a body, backing up their demands for food with threats they would take it by force if necessary from the shelves of merchants, the hungry men and women were supplied with $1,500 worth of staples.

Albert Walls, county Red Cross chairman, said today hastily written requisitions passed out by the merchants would be redeemed by the Red Cross. "Nobody is going to starve," he assured.

The Sabbath passed quietly. However, fears were expressed by local citizens that yesterday's demonstration would be repeated when the emergency doles were exhausted.

The merchandise amounted to about $3 a person, most of them heads of large families and 90 per cent of them white. Many of them were armed. Weeping women were scattered through the crowd of grim-faced farmers.

Local Red Cross officials announced "ample means" were available to meet the situation, but insisted they were for "orderly distribution" on proper requisitioning. It was a lack of Red Cross requisition blanks that motivated yesterday's troubles, officials said.

The Red Cross has been hampered in its work by imposters and on one occasion authorities have found it necessary to turn an applicant over to police for hoarding supplies.

Six Killed in Fall Of Two Airplanes

Three Die as Craft Crashes in Missouri, and Three in Texas Accident.

St. Joseph, Mo., Jan. 4 (A.P.).—Three men were killed in an airplane crash at Rosecrans Airport here today. They were: Winston L. Hyatt, St. Joseph commercial pilot; Leroy Riemer, St. Joseph pilot, and a man whose name was given as Payne.

Overton, Tex., Jan. 4 (A.P.).—Three men en route from Shreveport, La., to their homes in Dallas, were killed as their plane crashed into a tree near here today. The dead are: Addison Noerer, pilot, and Tom Holcomb and Horace Clark.

It is believed the men sought a place to land in a fog. T. C. Bradbury, on whose farm the plane fell, and several negroes extricated the bodies from the wreckage.

THREE WOMEN KEEP VIGIL OVER JOFFRE

Widow, Daughter-in-Law, Personal Friend Weep Alone by Body.

FUNERAL PLANS MADE

Paris, Jan. 4 (A.P.).—Three women—the widow, Mme. Lafliet and Mlle. Debaye—sadly bereft and alone in the mortuary chamber, maintained vigil tonight over the body of Joseph Jacques Cesaire Joffre, the man. To them he was husband, father-in-law and personal friend.

Just outside, in full-dress uniforms, Gen. Issaly, Col. Desmazes and Capt. de St. Servin, members of the dead soldier's staff, kept guard honor of "Papa" Joffre, their chief and their friend.

Tomorrow and Tuesday hundreds of thousands are expected to file past the catafalque in the chapel of the military school, and Wednesday millions of Frenchmen probably will line the streets and boulevards of Paris, surround the Arc de Triomphe, and fill Notre Dame Cathedral to pay last homage to Marshal Joffre, victor of the Marne and savior of France.

Tonight he still belongs to Mme. Joffre. "I want to be alone with him another day," she said. "Tomorrow he no longer belongs to me."

Visitors Are Barred.

In fulfillment of her wish no visitors were admitted to the chamber during today or this evening.

But outside in the streets surrounding the hospital St. Jean de Dieu the people of Paris have not abandoned in death the great soldier to whom they feel and say they owe their liberty.

Fully 3,000 persons spent this afternoon in the Rue Oudinot, while ministers of the French government, generals and ambassadors from foreign countries, came and signed their names on the register placed in the antechamber right off the street.

Premier Steeg, on leaving, said: "The great silent man who was Marshal Joffre today asks that peace and silence surround him."

Wrapped in General's Coat.

The marshal's body, wrapped in a long, black coat belonging to the uniform of a general of a division, which coat he wore in 1914 during the battle of the Marne, lies on a simple iron bed.

His face, just discernible in the feeble light of candles, has an expression of peace and repose. An immense silver crucifix stands on a table close to the bed beside a small bowl of holy water. The table and a few chairs comprise the furnishings of the small, bare hospital room.

Tomorrow morning at dawn the body will be transferred to the chapel of the military school in readiness for the population of Paris to begin filing past the catafalque at 9 a. m.

To Lie in Monument Court.

The body will lie in state from 9 a. m. until 9 p. m. both tomorrow and Tuesday. Final details for the funeral will be settled by the cabinet council tomorrow.

The present plans call for the cortege to leave the military school Wednesday at 7 a. m. and proceed to the Arc de Triomphe for a five minutes' halt and one moment of silence. The cortege then will proceed to Notre Dame Cathedral, where Cardinal Verdier will officiate at the ceremonies.

Afterward the body will be placed in a vault in the interior court of the Napoleonic monument at the Invalides. There it will be surrounded by flags, not only of the late war, but of all wars in which France participated. The body will remain there for two or three months until taken to the final resting place on the quiet little hill at Louveciennes, which Joffre loved so well.

6 Spaniards Hurt In Madrid Clash

Madrid, Janfl. 4 (By Telephone to London) (A.P.).—Six persons were injured today as mounted police charged in breaking up a demonstration by 250 persons in Puerta del Sol, principal square of Madrid.

The manifestation, in which mainly rail workers and students participated, was the first of this nature in the Spanish capital since martial law was proclaimed after two attempts at military revolt last month.

The trouble began when a group of rail men attempted to visit political prisoners and were refused entrance to the jail. Later the same group, augmented, attempted to parade, shouting protests against the government. Mounted police scattered them with sabers.

Theater Artist Slays Wife and Companion

Los Angeles, Jan. 4 (A.P.).—Frank Hugo, vaudeville musician, was held on a murder charge today, following the fatal shooting in his home of his wife, Lena, 30, and Louis White.

Hugo told police he led his wife to believe he would be out of town last night, but returned to his home with a friend, John Duca. He climbed in a window and found White and his wife together, he related. He told officers that he first shot White and then his wife.

ALFARO HASTENING RETURN TO PANAMA

BUSY THROUGH SUNDAY

(Associated Press.)

Dr. Ricardo J. Alfaro spent a busy Sabbath yesterday winding up his affairs as Minister of Panama to this country, preparatory to becoming chief executive of his native land.

The whirligig of recent events in Panama, which overthrew the government, thrust him into the presidency, and he is bending every effort to obey the call of his country at the earliest moment.

Leaving his office late Saturday night, the minister obtained a few hours' sleep, and was back at his desk at an early hour yesterday. He remained there until late last night.

The date of his departure has not been determined, but it was emphasized at the legation that this was not contingent upon American recognition of the new government, which is being studied by the State Department.

The decision of the department upon recognition was the subject of considerable speculation. The latest indication by Secretary Stimson was that action would be withheld, pending further consideration of such angles as the ability of the new regime to fulfill international obligations and the effect on the United States of its policies, including its stand on the waterway of the Panama Canal and certain rights accorded the United States by treaty.

A conversation Saturday night between the Panamanian president-designate and the Secretary of State apparently contributed nothing to clarification of the situation, as the question of recognition was said by Dr. Alfaro not to have been discussed. He explained the conversation was confined to an exchange of news and other information on the situation in Panama.

Dr. Alfaro explained that his immediate presence in Panama was not necessary, but he is expected to leave between January 15 and 25.

Girl Flier Forced Down by Deep Fog

Warsaw, Jan. 4 (A.P.).—Amy Johnson, the 23-year-old flier who left England New Year's Day on a projected flight to Peiping, was driven by fog to a forced landing late today at the village of Amelin, about 60 miles north of here. She was uninjured but the undercarriage of her machine was smashed.

Miss Johnson, who last summer flew from England to Australia in 19 days and is seeking new adventures, left Berlin for Warsaw at 10:27 a. m. today in the face of unfavorable weather. Atmospheric conditions were so bad she was driven northward and missed Warsaw entirely. Then, before she could get back on her course, a heavy wave of fog engulfed her and she was forced to come down.

"I am all right," she said. "I will leave my plane here and go on to Warsaw by train."

Boy and Girl Runaways From New York Held

Bound South because they were "afraid to go home," a New York boy and girl were picked up yesterday by Maryland State police. Corpl. J. W. Kries had received a lookout for Joseph Boettjer, 17 years old, and his companion, Margery Lamasa, 16, both of Avalon, N. Y.

Seeing the two on the Baltimore boulevard, the policeman stopped them and they told him their story. They are being held at the substation at Laurel until New York authorities come for them. Both said they would be glad to go home if their parents were not angry with them. The couple had stayed out late and were afraid to return to their homes.

Mutiny on British Ship Rumored at Plymouth

Plymouth, England, Jan. 4 (A.P.). This town and the adjoining naval port of Devonport buzzed tonight with rumors that mutiny had broken out aboard the submarine depot ship Lucia, now in the Devonport dockyard.

It was stated that 42 members of the Lucia's crew had been lodged in the naval barracks and others were sent to take their places. Officials admitted some trouble aboard but declared it did not amount to a mutiny, saying reports were exaggerated.

G. O. P. to Seek Inquiry Into New York Regime

Albany, Jan. 4 (N.Y.W.N.S.).—A legislative investigation embracing every branch of the government of New York City was agreed upon today by the executive committee of the Republican State committee, at the insistence of W. Kingsland Macy, the new State chairman.

A bill authorizing the investigation by a legislative committee will be introduced about February 15, after the Legislature has passed the budget, it was decided.

Wreath Put on Tomb Of Civil War Soldiers

Twenty-five daughters of Union veterans yesterday afternoon placed a wreath on the Tomb of the Civil War Unknown Dead in Arlington Cemetery, under which more than 2,000 soldiers are buried.

A brief hymn and prayer service preceded the placing of the wreath. The daughters of Union veterans hold a service of this kind at frequent intervals during the year.

Three Children Dead In Fiery Auto Wreck

Melvin, Iowa, Jan. 4 (A.P.).—Three children of Mr. and Mrs. John Samstra, of Alcester, S. Dak., were burned to death near here today when their automobile overturned and burst into flames.

The dead are Anna, 14; Diana, 5, and Arthur, 10 months old.

BACKS BANKERS

R. C. STEPHENSON.

BANKS TO IMPROVE, SAYS THEIR LEADER

R. C. Stephenson Predicts 1930 Experiences Will Prove Beneficial.

FOR HONEST OVERSIGHT

New York, Jan. 4 (A.P.).—Rome C. Stephenson, president of the American Bankers Association, said in a statement today, "We will have the strongest banking situation we have ever enjoyed and one worthy of the highest confidence of all our people," as a result of the elimination of "undeniable weaknesses" in the country's banking structure in 1930.

Stephenson predicted most of the closed banks would pay in full or a large part. He said also: "Despite the prominence in the news of banking difficulties, only a small fraction of the total banking figures are affected."

Depositor Has Duty Also.

"The function of Government in banking is to promote and enforce careful banking administration through the system of examination and supervision. This, however, does not relieve the individual depositor from the necessity of judging and choosing carefully as to his banking relations. He must inquire for himself into the character and type of institution and men he shall do business with, satisfying himself as to their reputation, reliability and capability. These qualities are essential to complete the element of safety and dependability in any human institution.

"The past year has been a severe one for banking as well as all lines of business. Banking in some instances and in some localities has reflected unavoidably something of the character and conditions of the times through which we have been passing.

"Looking back, we realize that much that was unwise crept into some of our business activities. While on the individual bankers there rests without qualification the direct responsibility for the prudent, honest conduct of their institutions, nevertheless the soundness of banking as a practical matter of fact is a community problem in which the public has a part to play as well as bankers and Government officials."

How Public Can Aid.

The public can exert influence in shaping the character of banking also, Stephenson said, by supporting the purposes of bankers "to maintain intelligent independent and honest banking supervision."

In many bank troubles the only thing wrong with a bank was an unduly suspicious and apprehensive state of mind in its customers, Mr. Stephenson said, "created by no act or condition of its own but by baseless rumors which sometimes led them to destroy the value of their own deposits by demanding them immediately, forcing a bank to sacrifice its assets and otherwise disrupt its financial operations."

Stephenson reminded the public that "deposits are not kept as cash but are invested in loans and securities, and even the soundest assets of this type require some time to reconvert at full value into cash deposits."

President of Cuba Ardent Fishermen

Former Country Lad Sits in Palace and Yearns for Old Sport.

Havana, Jan. 4 (A.P.).—A country lad who has riven to the presidency of the Cuban Republic sits in the great white executive palace and longs for nothing so much as a small boat, a can of bait and plenty of time to fish.

While others in Cuba have grown excited over the political situation, President Gerardo Machado y Morales has been apparently unmoved by the shafts directed at him. He has worked and amused himself as usual, frequently traveling by boat to his pet fishing ground off the coast of Matanzas.

He sat in his office and talked of the "restful" high sea, swordfish that weighed 250 pounds, the measured rocking of a small boat and the thrill that comes from a vigorous tug at a fishing line.

There is nothing about the appearance of the President of Cuba to suggest the swashbuckler, caricatured by his political opponents. Tanned, rugged, of medium height, stockily built, with gray hair which still shows traces of raven black. He has a calmness and reserve which indicate force and poise.

Two Persons Are Killed In Poison-Liquor Party

San Francisco, Jan. 4 (A.P.).—A "poison liquor party," which began New Year's Eve and lasted until Friday, has taken two lives, police reported today, and a third person is in a critical condition.

August Hinz, 56, laundry worker and host of the fatal party, died yesterday. Mrs. Margaret "Teddy" Fitzsimmons, 25, chorus girl, died today. Miss Marie Pendleton, 27, another girl, was seriously ill. All were poisoned by wood alcohol, doctors said. Police began a search for a "pretty blonde bootlegger," who, they were told, furnished the poison liquor for the party.

BOND TREND CALLED RECOVERY PROPHET

Study of Yields Is Said to Indicate That Good Times Are in Prospect.

PAST ACCURACY IS CITED

New York, Jan. 4 (A.P.).—The conclusion that business recovery apparently can not be many months away, is indicated by the result of a four-year investigation of the trend of bond yield over a period of 74 years, authorized for publication by the National Bureau of Economic Research tomorrow.

"While it is no part of the work of the national bureau to make forecasts of business conditions," it says, "it seems eminently proper to summarize the results of our investigations of past experiences."

The investigation shows that with the exception of a recent and evidently temporary interruption, bond yields have been declining since September, 1929, and that such a decline has in the past been the usual forerunner of business recovery.

Based on High Grade Bonds.

The 74-year chart of bond yields, based on high grade railroad obligations, is a part of an investigation which Dr. Fred R. Macauley, of the staff of the bureau, has been conducting for the past four years. It includes the relationships of bond yields, interest rates, stock prices and general business since January, 1857.

Dr. Macauley's bond yield index is believed to be the most scientific long-range index of this sort compiled. A chart of its movements clearly shows the peaks which have foreshadowed periods of business depressions, and the downsweep which was the forerunner of recovery. In the case of the 1907 depression, when there were no complicating factors such as currency unsettlement or wartime conditions, the action of the index is graphic. From a low of 3.441 in 1905, it rose to a peak of 4.062 in November of 1907. The index then moved steadily downward, reaching a bottom at 3.606 in February 1909. By autumn of that year general business activity was back to normal.

Better Guide Than Silk.

"Sequences of economic factors, as revealed by past history," says the bureau's bulletin, "often constitute almost the only means of attempting to predict the future." Such sequences, it adds, should be concerned with fundamentally important factors. It believes a fall in bond yields is more important than a rise in the price of silk, which has long been regarded as an indicator of economic improvement.

"With a very considerable range in the time of lag and with a number of exceptions as to even the order, certain financial factors tend to turn before a turn in general business," the bulletin says. In the present case, it continues, "if business recovery were delayed many months, the lag after the peak in call money, time money, commercial paper and high-grade bond yields would be unusually long."

Pomp of Inaugural Banned in Arizona

New Democratic Governor to Assume His Duties Quietly Today.

Phoenix, Ariz., Jan. 4 (A.P.).—Arizona is experiencing the quietest change of governorship in its 18 years of statehood.

There was no inaugural ceremony, no grand ball. The statehouse clocks in silent halls are ticking the old administration out and the new in, the change coming at midnight. John C. Phillips, outgoing governor, and George W. P. Hunt, incoming chief executive, said they expected to be sleeping peacefully when the "zero hour" struck tonight.

Six times the 70-year-old campaigner has been sworn in as governor by a Supreme Court justice with pomp and ceremony. He had danced and made merry in true Western fashion. He decided to inaugurate his seventh term in different fashion.

Gov. Hunt is dynamic and outspoken, especially on the Boulder Dam project, which Arizona is opposing. He brings with him an administration entirely Democratic. Gov. Phillips and several other retiring State officers are Republicans.

about the $50,000 special account opened here by the committee last October for the convenience of Lucas.

The latter has testified this account was pledged as security for a $4,000 personal loan to buy campaign literature, $800 worth of which went to the regular Republican organization in Nebraska to oppose Norris.

Nye has been of the opinion that more than $800 was used against Norris. Lucas has denied this and Nutt, in a public statement, said all of the money checked against the special account—$32,000—went into eight States for congressional candidates.

In his letter to Senator Nye, Mr. McKelvie said he had "no desire to prolong your inquiry, but as a citizen of Nebraska I reflect the sentiments of a large number of unprejudiced people in that State, who would like to see full justice done on all sides."

"May I renew my request," he wrote, "that your committee investigate fully and report soon upon all expenditures having to do with circular matter or publications that were sent into Nebraska during the late Republican primaries and the subsequent general election."

He then quoted an editorial in the Lincoln State Journal opposing the importing of money into Nebraska for any candidate and added:

"When I was in Nebraska recently I was informed that not a few thousand but probably hundreds of thousands of copies of a certain publication were sent into Nebraska in the interest of Senator Norris. If this is true, it must have involved the expenditure of a large amount of money. So far as I was able to ascertain no report was made regarding this.

"Also it was currently reported that a considerable number of campaign workers from outside the State established headquarters in Lincoln and worked assiduously during the primaries. Among other things they urged Democrats to go into the Republican primaries, thus violating the spirit and purpose of the law. It appears that no report was made regarding the expenditure of this force."

CONGRESS RESUMES ITS SESSION TODAY

Eugene Meyer, of New York, to be governor of the Federal Reserve Board.

Senate leaders are confident that if President Hoover gives formal assurance that he will not call the Senate into special session to consider the World Court, one of the big difficulties confronting them in clearing the way for adjournment on March 4 will be erased.

The Republicans of the Senate foreign relations committee voted to defer this subject until next December. This action, however, will not prevent the President from calling a special session. Informal assurance has come from the White House that Mr. Hoover did not contemplate this action but he is expected to give formal assurance shortly.

Mercer G. Johnston, director of the People's Legislative Service, yesterday issued a statement demanding that the Senate recall the nominations of Chairman Smith, Marcel Garsaud and Claude L. Draper of the Power Commission because of their discharge of Solicitor Russell and Accountant King.

He urged that if it is impossible to recall the nominations after the members had been sworn into office that they be impeached.

Noted Contractor Dead.

Chicago, Jan. 4.—Bernard H. Lichter, contractor, who built some of Chicago's famous structures, including the old Potter Palmer home on Lake Shore drive and the Auditorium Hotel-Opera House, is dead. Outside Chicago he constructed the Siegel-Cooper Building in New York, the county building at Fort Worth, and the Denver Public Library.

CURRENT EVENTS IN VIRGINIA AND MARYLAND

MILITIA'S COMMAND SHIFTS AT DANVILLE

Col. Opie Leaves Subordinate in Charge in Strike Area.

WORKERS HEAR FREY

Special to The Washington Post.

Danville, Va., Jan. 4.—Col. Hiram L. Opie, of the 116th Virginia Infantry, who has been here since Thanksgiving, when 900 soldiers were sent to Schoolfield, left tonight with other staff officers, placing the command of the 250 troops still in the mill village in the hands of Maj. Reese Gilbert. It is generally understood that the middle of the month will see all troops recalled unless something happens in the meantime requiring their continued service.

Lindsey Moore, heading the county constabulary, said this evening he was preparing to watch the mill gates at Schoolfield closely tomorrow because of reports that there would be a renewal of mass demonstrations. He admitted, however, that similar reports have been heard several times recently.

John P. Frey, secretary of the metal trade department of the American Federation of Labor, came from Washington today and addressed the strikers at the hall. Again the union went on record as being prepared to arbitrate grievances and "to lay our cards on the table."

D. W. Bolick, organizer, introduced the speaker and asked the membership whether it was prepared to renounce the union and return to work. There was a resounding "no." Frey in his address said that the winning of the strike is important for the future generation.

VIRGINIA FAIR GROUP TO HOLD CONVENTION

HORSE RACING IS TOPIC

Special to The Washington Post.

Petersburg, Va., Jan. 4.—The Virginia Association of Fairs will hold its fourteenth annual session in Petersburg January 12 and 13. Twenty-nine fair associations of Virginia, West Virginia and Maryland are represented in this organization.

Lieut. Gov. James T. Price of Virginia will address the convention at the meeting Monday night, January 12. H. B. Watkins, of Danville, president of the association, will be toastmaster. Other officers of the association are T. B. McCaleb, president, of Covington; T. L. Felts, vice president, of Galax; Mrs. Lem P. Jordan, vice president, of Suffolk; Charles A. Somma, vice president, of Richmond; C. B. Ralston, secretary and treasurer, of Staunton.

Several matters of grave importance to fair associations will be brought up for discussion at this meeting. Prof. W. P. Moore, assistant director of V. P. I. extension division, will speak on the "part agriculture fairs play in cooperative extension work in agriculture and home economics under the V. P. I. extension service." Community building through a county fair will be the subject for discussion by Edward V. Breeden, secretary of the Orange Fair Association.

Of general interest will be a discussion on the future of horse racing at agricultural fairs. The addresses of welcome will be by Mayor I. Val Parham, and the response will be by J. C. Brown, secretary of the Bedford Fair. These addresses will be followed by the annual address by President Watkins.

ANTIHORSE STEALING ASSOCIATION ELECTS

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST.
P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Clarendon 2324-W-2.

At the annual meeting of the Woodlawn Horse Protective Association, A. Harmon Roberts, of Newington, was reelected president; Harvey Clapp, of Accotink, was elected secretary and F. H. Wilkinson, treasurer. George C. Gillingham, Joseph W. Cox and Albert R. Harrison were reelected trustees.

This association was organized in 1866, and is one of the oldest of such organizations in the State and one of the few remaining. The coming of the automobile has left but little need for the association which was formed for the purpose of offering some protection to the farmers and residents of the communities against horse thieves who abounded in this section at the close of the Civil War. In late years the association has offered rewards for the recovery of automobiles stolen from members of the organization and the members have contributed liberally toward welfare work in the county.

The Fairfax Town Council will meet this evening in the offices of Thomas P. Chapman. Consideration will be given to awarding contracts for supplies for the town's new water system and methods of selling the bonds.

District Deputy State President H. E. Wright will install the new officers of the McLean Council, Order of Fraternal Americans, at the meeting tomorrow evening.

The Corban Club of the Congregational Church at Herndon will meet tomorrow afternoon. Officers for the coming year will be elected.

The Groveton Community League will meet tomorrow evening in the schoolhouse at Groveton. Miss Irene Richardson has charge of the entertainment program which will follow the business meeting.

District Deputy State President G. Ashley Money will install the officers of the Farmers and Mechanics Lodge, Order of Fraternal Americans, at Andrew Chapel at the meeting tomorrow evening.

The Baptist Women's Union at Falls Church will meet tomorrow at the home of its president, Mrs. George Hawxhurst, who will lead the program, her subject being "The Challenge of Unfinished Tasks."

The Falls Church Town Council will hold a special meeting this evening to correct the list of resident freeholders who are entitled to take part in the bond issue election on January 13.

The Fairfax Garden Club will meet tomorrow afternoon at 3 o'clock at the home of Miss Jennie Moore. The club has accepted the estimate submitted by County Engineer F. N. Larkin for construction of new steps to the town hall and the grading of front and north sides of the building. The side of the building on the Lee highway was graded and landscaped last year by the club. Work will be started on the building as soon as the new water system, which is being installed by the town, has been completed.

At a meeting of the Falls Church Odd Fellows, Wilber Fisher was elected noble grand; W. N. Harman was elected vice grand; J. G. Abbott, treasurer; J. R. Gorham, financial secretary, and Clark Crossman, recording secretary. The new officers will be installed Thursday night by District Deputy C. E. Butler, of the Sarepta Lodge, Alexandria.

The Columbia Street Association at Falls Church will meet this evening at the home of Mrs. Easton for the annual election of officers.

Forty members of Sarepta Lodge will visit Accotink Lodge, No. 75, I. O. O. F., this evening. The meeting will be held in the lodge hall at Accotink. District Deputy Grand Master Charles E. Butler will conduct the installation services. The principal address of the evening will be given by Past Grand Master Edmund H. Allen, of Newington.

At a meeting of the Council of the Church of the Brethren at Oakton, E. L. Myers was reelected church treasurer; Mrs. Fred Cunningham, chorister; Mrs. Landon Miller, pianist, and R. J. Miller was elected to the ministerial board for a three-year term. The board of religious education to have charge of the work of the young people includes J. W. Pobst, O. K. Miller, E. L. Myers, with the Rev. Casper Driver ex officio. Russell Miller and E. L. Myers were elected associate superintendents of the Sunday school.

The regular monthly meeting of the Franconia School and Civic League will be held in the Franconia Schoolhouse tomorrow evening.

Capt. Beauregard Dies in New York

Grandson of Confederate General Was Formerly Stationed Here.

Capt. Gustave T. Beauregard, formerly of this city and for the last several years in the New York office of the Federal Trade Commission, died Saturday at his home on Staten Island, N. Y. Although ill for the past two years, he had recently returned to his work, and his death was unexpected.

Capt. Beauregard was a native of New Orleans and a grandson of Gen. P. T. Beauregard. In 1917, he was commissioned in the Military Intelligence Division and stationed in Washington, attached for a time to the office of the Secretary of War. After his discharge in 1920 he went with the Federal Trade Commission. He was a member of the Delta Tau Delta Fraternity.

In 1922 he married Miss Mildred Greene, of this city and Warrenton, Va., who survives him with three young children. He is also survived by his mother, Mrs. C. T. Beauregard, of New Orleans; his sisters, Mrs. J. B. Diamond, of Gaithersburg, Md., and Mrs. Edward Clarke Morse, of this city.

Funeral services will be held at 2:30 this afternoon at Arlington Cemetery with military honors.

Lucas, of Jacksonville, Fla.; E. M. Lucas, of Allston, Mass.; E. A. Lucas, of Prince George, and G. C. Lucas, of Panama. She is also survived by twelve nephews and three grandnephews.

1931 TAG DEADLINE SET IN ARLINGTON

ZONING PROBLEMS UP

ARLINGTON COUNTY,
BUREAU OF THE POST.
Tel. Clar. 509. Clarendon, Va.

There will be no extension of time allowed automobile owners to obtain license tags beyond Wednesday, January 14, J. V. Turner, who is in charge of the distribution of tags in Arlington County, announced yesterday.

He will be in the office of Sheriff Howard B. Fields at the courthouse daily up to and including Wednesday, January 14. His hours at the office are from 9 in the monring to 4 in the afternoon. In the evening tags may be obtained at his office at East Falls Church.

Owners of automobiles are warned by E. J. McDermott, sergeant of State police in this district, all Virginians operating automobiles without the new license will be haled into court after the deadline is passed.

A meeting of the Arlington County Civic Federation committee on internal county improvements and zoning has been called for tomorrow night at 7:30, at the Lyon Park Community House, immediately before the monthly meeting of the federation.

The public hearing advertised by the county board of supervisors for Thursday, January 29, to consider changes in the county zoning ordinance, and the impasse over ratification by Arlington and Fairfax Counties and the City of Alexandria of the Ball act providing for the creation of the Virginia Park and Planning Commission, are matters which will be discussed by the committee. It is likely recommendation on both matters will be reported to the federation.

The members of the committee are Arthur Orr, Lyon Park, chairman; Commander F. T. Wright, Livingstone Heights; Thomas E. Gilbert, Fort Myer Heights; John C. Gall, Aurora Hills; Herbert Cpward, East Falls Church; C. P. Warner, Ashton Heights; O. G. Funk, Glebewod; Mrs. Bertha Kelly, Ashton Heights, and Mrs. Ruby G. Simpson, Cherrydale.

Fire caused damage estimated at $5,000 in the home of Maj. John H. Pirie, Military road, Cherrydale.

Maj. Pirie last night praised the members of the Cherrydale Fire Department, first to respond. They poured two streams into the home which, he said, had much to do with keeping down the loss. The fire was confined largely to the upper story and roof. Engines from all sections of the county responded.

There will be a meeting of the executive committee of the Parent-Teacher Association of the Washington-Lee High School in the school auditorium tomorrow night at 8 o'clock.

The relief committee of the Arlington County Civic Federation, of which Thomas R. Mechem is chairman, has obtained from many owners of woodland in the county use of wood on the ground ready to cut up.

Application for fuel should be made to Mrs. Mae E. Jacobs, superintendent of public welfare, at her office in the courthouse.

The following subcommitee on relief has been appointed to arrange for a benefit card party this month. Mrs. Claude S. Semones, chairman; Mrs. Carleton K. Lewis, Mrs. L. C. McNemar, Mrs. Eleanor Gary and Mrs. Harry A. Pellows.

Plans for the year's work will be the principal topic at the meeting of the Fort Myer Heights Citizens Association tonight in the auditorium of the Woodrow Wilson School at 8 o'clock.

Robert E. Plymale requests all members to attend. He will announce appointment of the standing committees.

Plans looking to the perfecting of an organization to be known as the Arlington County Council of Parent-Teacher Associations will be completed at a meeting tonight in the auditorium of the Washington Lee High School. All school associations in the county are asked to have representatives present.

The vestry of St. George's Episcopal Church will hold its January meeting tomorrow night at 8 o'clock at the rectory.

The Margaret Hester Circle of St. George's Episcopal Church will hold a luncheon meeting tomorrow at 1 o'clock in the home of Mrs. J. N. Roberts, Rocky Hill, Rosslyn.

The new officers of Ballston Council No. 20, Daughters of America, will be installed tomorrow night in the Firemen's Hall at 8 o'clock.

NEW START PLANNED ON OCEAN HOP TODAY

An oil leak was discovered in the rocker box, and Navy mechanics, under direction of Capt. Kenneth Whiting, commandant of the Hampton Roads air station, took the plane over for a thorough overhauling.

Navy fliers were giving full cooperation to put the craft in shape for the long flight to Paris, via Bermuda and the Azores. No other defects of a serious nature had been found tonight, and it was believed that tomorrow's take-off was assured.

Mankin, aged 70 years, died Friday night at the home of her son, Harry Mankin, in Atlanta, Ga., and the funeral will be held this afternoon from Demaine's Chapel, this city, conducted by the Rev. Dr. D. L. Snyder, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church South. Burial will be in Union Cemetery.

The deceased was the widow of Charles Mankin, and a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Brown, of this city. Besides the son, with whom she made her home, she is survived by a son and daughter, Ernest Mankin and Mrs. Minnie May Shelhorn; also a brother and sister, Harry Brown and Mrs. Annie Bruce, all of Alexandria.

The annual meeting of the Mary Custis Lee Seventeenth Virginia Regiment Chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, will be held tomorrow evening, at 7:30 o'clock, in Lee Camp Hall. Officers will be elected.

A missionary institute for the Alexandria district will be held today in the Methodist Episcopal Church South, beginning at 10:30 a. m., presided over by the Rev. Dr. E. V. Regester, presiding elder of the district. Speakers will be Bishop William B. Beauchamp, of Richmond, and Dr. W. G. Cramm, general secretary of the missions board of the Methodist Church.

Tests Make Rayon From Cotton Stalks

Chemist Asserts That Cost Would Be Far Under Present Expense.

Chapel Hill, N. C., Jan. 4 (A.P.).—A new industry from cotton, utilizing the entire plant except the roots in the production of rayon, is the goal of experiments being conducted by Dr. Frank K. Cameron, professor of chemistry at the University of North Carolina.

Results obtained after extensive experimentation, Dr. Cameron said, indicate the material for making rayon can be supplied at the cost of slightly more than one-twentieth under present methods of producing lint for the same purpose.

Methods of production are also revolutionary. The professor purposes to substitute the operations generally used in the growing of wheat and hay, eliminating laborious picking by harvesting the crop with a mowing machine.

Dr. Cameron said cotton is probably the richest of all plants in available cellulose, the basic material of rayon, 95 to 98 per cent of the lint being cellulose, of a high quality, suitable for conversion into the finest types of rayon.

E. W. Cartlidge Dies.

Mexico City, Jan. 4 (A.P.).—E. W. Cartlidge, formerly of Topeka, Kans., but a resident in Mexico 27 years, died today. He was vice president of Sanborn's, the largest American store here, and had worked until two weeks ago, although he had been blind and crippled for ten years. He was considered an expert economist.

POLLARD WILL PUT WILSON ON BENCH

DEATH PREPARES WAY

Special to The Washington Post.

Petersburg, Va., Jan. 4.—As soon as he has conferred with Richard T. Wilson, Gov. Pollard, it is said, will appoint him judge of the Hustings Court of Petersburg to succeed the late Judge J. M. Mullen.

The governor desires to consult Wilson, before making the appointment, on the time it would be convenient for him to assume the duties of the office.

Gov. Pollard recently announced he would appoint Mr. Wilson if and when a vacancy existed.

The announcement at that time followed the death of Charles T. Lassiter, who was elected to the office by the General Assembly in 1930 after Judge Mullen had informed the Legislature he would not seek reelection. The term for which Mr. Lassiter was elected was to have started February 1, this year, but he died without qualifying for the office.

There was no vacancy in the judgeship at the time of Judge Mullen's death and he would have been eligible to have served until 1932.

ing the removal of the Rev. Kowalewski.

The latter, said Father Bona, had been given a canonical trial and ordered to resign. He had been relieved of duty in the parish pending his appeal to the church authorities in Rome.

The trial, it was explained, was ordered by Cardinal Mundelein after the Rev. Kowalewski had struck an assistant.

Pending decision on the appeal, the Rev. Bona said, Mgr. Anthony Halgas of Calumet City, would act as temporary pastor.

JOB INSURANCE SEEN AS NO DRAIN ON NATION

Losses Declared as Now Falling With Smashing Force on Employers and Employes Alike; Insurance Said Not to Add Costs to Output.

By ROYAL MEEKER,
Formerly Chief, Federal Bureau of Labor Statistics.
(Irving Fisher Service.)

The only cure for unemployment is employment. This sounds like saying the cure for illness is health; the way to be strong is to lift heavy weights every morning before breakfast; the way to be good is to avoid doing wrong.

There are, however, three major policies which may be inaugurated at once for the amelioration and prevention of unemployment.

First is planning a consumption-production program in all industries for several years in the future so as to minimize or eliminate overproduction or underconsumption. This should include a more equitable distribution of the products of industry—that is, of the national money income.

Second is stabilizing of the general price level—that is, the buying power of money.

Finally, there is the task of providing carefully planned, all-inclusive unemployment insurance to prevent unemployment, as well as to care for the unemployed.

To make a start on any of the measures I have proposed requires a degree of knowledge, of cooperative spirit and of authority which are at present largely lacking. If the main framework of the existing economic order is to be preserved, these deficiencies must be supplied. If it is difficult to make a beginning, it is even more difficult to carry through to a successful finish. But the evil of continually recurring unemployment demands bold and drastic action. Nothing worth doing is easy.

Plan Output for Consumption.

The measure of first importance is naturally the most difficult of all. All that can be attempted here is to emphasize the necessity of directing and controling our work toward the end of gratifying our wants most effectively. The working out of the complete program will require years of careful research and experimentation.

A beginning, however small, has been made in the planning of production for consumption. These small beginnings should be supported and expanded as rapidly as possible to include all industries throughout the whole Nation, and, eventually the nations trading with us. This program is of tremendous difficulty and magnitude, but it is indispensable to regularization of business and employment. It calls for all the genius of organization and statesmanship among our industrial, financial and political leaders. It demands the fullest understanding between employers and employes' organizations, the public and their representatives. The very difficulties in the way should stimulate our leaders to overcome them.

Stabilize the Price Level.

The reasonable stabilization of the price level is indispensable to the reasonable stabilization of business. Here again there must be clear understanding and complete cooperation between financial organizations and the public agencies. More progress has been made in theory and in practical application in this field than in either of the others. Numerous books and numberless articles have been written on the subject of stabilizing the price level. While it can not be proved statistically that price fluctuations precede and cause business fluctuations, nevertheless, price changes do affect business profoundly.

A consumption-production program would be very difficult or impossible to carry into effect without reasonably stable prices. A good beginning in monetary control has been made by the Federal Reserve System, but it is only a beginning and there is serious danger that the feeble efforts already made may be repudiated by Congress unless business men act vigorously to support and strengthen the system. The completion of the task will be difficult, but it can and must be done, if socialistic and communistic experiments are to be avoided.

Assure Against Unemployment.

Unemployment insurance should be enacted primarily to prevent unemployment to take care of the unemployed. To avoid confusion fundamental terms must be made clear.

First, unemployment insurance is a means of distributing the losses due to business crises and depressions among all buyers om commodities, instead of letting them fall with smashing force upon unlucky individual employers and employes as at present.

Second, the fundamental principle of insurance is the distribution of losses among a large body of risk-takers. Losses so distributed would cost the employers and insurance carriers nothing and the consumers who ultimately would pay the bill could detect no difference in prices, so slight would be the portion of expense falling on any one commodity.

Will Not Add Cost to Output.

Third, the notion that the whole cost of unemployment insurance will be an added cost upon production is absurd. This theory, which seems to be accepted by most employers without question, assumes that unemployment now costs nothing because no system exists to care for the unemployed. A national employers' organization has published a statement declaring that unemployment insurance would cost each year from $195,000,000 to $334,000,000. Possibly the costs would total those sums if unemployment were not reduced.

The total cost of insurance is of no importance. The difference between the cost of unemployment under the insurance plan and under no plan at all is of vital importance. We must quit deluding ourselves with the foolish fancy that unemployment doesn't cost us anything so long as we do not recognize it. Make no mistake. We are paying for unemployment and paying through the nose in taxes for maintaining our extravagant poorhouses, our ever-present street beggars, our sporadic and prodigal outbursts of charity to keep the unemployed from starving and freezing, the colossal costs of inefficiency and "ca'canny" directly ascribable to unemployment and the fear of losing the job.

Even if unemployment insurance should add $500,000,000 to the prices of all commodities, the whole Nation, including employers, would be the gainers. The total drain upon the national income would be substantially less than at present, but the greatest gain would be in the improved morale of workers freed from the fear of being thrown out of a job.

Unemployment an Accident.

Fourth, the unemployed eligible for insurance would consist of those alone who lose their jobs through business hazards and not through the workers' own fault. Unemployment is really an industrial accident or disease. In fact, it is the only truly industrial disability. One can fall ill or fall and break a leg at home as easily as at work. One is more likely to get killed or maimed by an auto on the highway than by an operation on the job; but the only way one can become unemployed is to lose his job. Unemployment is just as insurable as illness or traumatic disability.

Unemployment insurance is not intended to pay workers for not working. Its most important effect is prevention. Unemployment insurance will unquestionably act like workmen's accident compensation insurance to prevent the disability insured against.

It is no cause for regret that this country has not thus far resorted to unemployment insurance as a cure-all for unemployment. Insurance should be utilized only as one part of a completely rounded program to combat booms accompanied by hectic overunemployment followed by depressions with underemployment and unemployment.

The percentages of unemployed to estimated total labor supply were calculated from 1897 to 1926 by Prof. Paul H. Douglas from all available sources. The figures for 1927 to 1930 are rough estimates made by the author.

STOCK PRICE RALLY CONTINUES IN WEEK

Open Sessions of 1931 Record Further Advances in New York Market.

STEADY TRADING NOTED

By E. W. DIEFENDORF
(Irving Fisher Service.)

The present rally in stock prices on the New York Stock Exchange began on December 30, when the Irving Fisher all-industrials index was forced ahead by 1.7 per cent. The closing session of the old year found stock prices still strong, with the level at 93.7, showing a gain of 1.5 per cent over the preceding day. New Year's Day seems to have "pepped up" public sentiment. Although at the opening on January 2 the rally lost force, it was not for long, and at the close the level had been forced to 96.1, with a gain of 2.6 per cent over the previous day's close and 5.8 per cent above the week's low of 90.8 on December 29.

The groups moved with the market, aviation stocks leading, with a net gain over last week of 11 per cent. Agricultural equipment and oils closed last week with gains of 8 per cent each; building supplies, coppers, motors and office equipment with gains of 7 per cent each; auto accessories and investment trust up by 6 per cent, and foods, radio and theaters, stores and utilities up by 5 per cent.

Preferred stocks suffered a slight loss of 0.6 per cent, not benefiting by the Friday rally, while chemicals, machinery, steels, tobaccos and rails stocks were advanced by less than 3 per cent each.

Steady Level Noted.

Due to the fact that the rally was concentrated in the late-week sessions, the weekly averages indicated a steady rather than rising level.

Trading in all-stocks on the New York Stock Exchange held steady last week at $85,000,000, which was the preceding week's average daily value traded. Common industrial stocks tradings dropped by 6 per cent to $60,500,000.

The utilities and oils groups were conspicuous in the rises, with the coppers, agricultural equipment and steel groups leading the falls.

Berlin Stocks Rise.

The three leading European stock exchanges held steady in the closing week of 1930. Last week the index of London stock prices fell by 0.23 per cent, while Paris and Berlin stock prices rose by 0.70 and 5.73 per cent, respectively.

Each of these foreign bourses closed 1930 only slightly above their two-year record low; in the two years London stock prices have fallen by 37 per cent from 140.2 on Junary 25, 1929, to 87.7 on December 19, 1930; Paris stock prices have declined by 52 per cent from 181.3 on February 8, 1929, to 86.2 on December 26, 1930, and Berlin stock prices have dropped by 51 per cent from 117.6 on January 4, 1929, to 57.6 on December 26, 1930.

In 1929, the highest levels of stock prices in London and Berlin were in January, while Paris stocks held up through February 8. The low level in all three cases was in November. Over this period the London index dropped by 24 per cent, Paris by 26 per cent and Berlin by 29 per cent. From the 1929 lows to the 1930 highs in January, 1930, London stocks advanced by 6 per cent, Paris stocks by 17 per cent and Berlin stocks by 13 per cent. From their respective January, 1930, highs to the recent December lows, the London index has fallen by 22 per cent, Paris by 45 per cent and Berlin by 39 per cent.

Less Severe in London.

The break has been less severe in London during the past two years, with each of the major movements indicating that London stocks are backed by better sentiment. The past year's drop in stock prices in London alone, was less acute than that of the 1929.

The speculative group of industrial stocks led the graded groups in last week's sharp advance in average stock prices. A net gain of 5.8 per cent brought the level, at last week's close, to 56.1, with a gain of 10 per cent over the December 29 low of 51.2.

Semi-investment stocks rose by 5.3 per cent last week, closing at 73.8, or 6 per cent in advance of the December 29 low of 69.4.

Investment securities again represented more conservative buying, as they rose by 4.2 per cent last week to 132.4, gaining by 5 per cent over the December 29 low of 125.8.

The Way to Get Wealthy.

A few grow wealthy during a time of inflation by going into debt, and then having their debts virtually wiped out by that inflation. Sometimes the same people or their families get caught in the reverse tide of deflation, and are ruined. Hugo Stinnes was an example of the former, while his heirs were caught in the backwash.

Oil Conservation Action Seen Soon

Producer Says Program of Control Now Ready for Adoption.

Houston, Tex., Jan. 4 (A.P.).—The oil man's victory over his worst enemy, overproduction, is in near prospect, W. A. Parish, president of the Humble Oil & Refining Co., said today.

"I believe," he said, "that the effort to establish an equitable production of crude oil, so that the supply shall not exceed the demand, is all but an accomplished fact."

"I know that we must carry our cooperative effort to final success, with the result that we will produce our oil at less cost; we will receive for it a fair price and contribute to the conservatio nof this greatest natural resource of the United States. Refiners are limiting crude runs to a volume which, if the effort continues, will permit the industry to go into the consuming season next spring without dangerously increased stocks of gasoline," he continued.

Chicago Banks Enter New Year in Good Shape

Chicago, Jan. 4 (A.P.).—Chicago banks enter the new year stronger than they were at the beginning of 1930. This was shown today in statements of condition as on the last day of 1930.

Larger deposits, cash resources and smaller loans were reported in comparison with a year ago. Likewise, strength in all three directions was greater than at the time of the last call, made on September 24.

Decrease Seen in Sales Of Mail Order Firm

Chicago, Jan. 4 (A.P.).—Montgomery Ward & Co. today reported sales for December of $28,672,184, compared with $35,799,316 for December, 1929, a decrease of $7,127,132, or nearly 20 per cent.

Sales for the year totaled $272,319,625, compared with $291,530,621, a decrease of $19,210,996, or 6½ per cent.

The Mark Did Fall—and How!

When the German mark became so deflated after the war, the Germans themselves did not think of the mark as falling, but that commodities were more expensive. The same illusion is present in every country; each thinks of his own currency as stable, while prices around them change.

WHOLESALE PRICES REACH NEW LOWS

DOLLAR IS STILL GAINING

Wholesale commodity prices dropped by 0.63 per cent last week to a new low of 78.5. Last week's decline was the sharpest in three weeks. The purchasing power of the dollar in wholesale markets now stands at 127.4, or 27.4 cents above the 1926 value.

From the 1929 high of 99.1 during the week ended July 26, the price level of wholesale commodities has shown a 21 per cent drop. The decline in 1930 from the January high of 93.7 to date was by 16 per cent, over twice as great as the total 7 per cent drop in 1929.

Wholesale commodity prices in England continued off last week by 0.43 per cent. The index of German wholesale prices resumed the decline, following the preceding week's gain of 0.45 per cent, to drop by 0.56 per cent to a new low. The French market showed the firmest position, rising by 0.13 per cent to substantiate the preceding week's gain of 0.53 per cent.

Level in England Off.

In 1929 from the year's high to low the commodity price level in England fell by 7 per cent, in France 9 per cent and in Germany by 5 per cent. From the 1930 high to low, English prices dropped by 21 per cent, French prices by 11 per cent and Berlin prices by 11 per cent. The increased rate of decline in 1930 was most marked in England, where the rate of decline was three times that of 1929, while it was 2.2 times more acute in Germany, and but 1.2 times more acute in France.

Agricultural Products Fall.

Agricultural products, both in the raw and finished state, suffered a sharp drop in price last week, following an indication of increased resistance to lower levels during the preceding week's movement. The agricultural index dropped by 1.34 per cent to 73.8. Farm products dropped by 0.74 per cent, following the preceding week's rise, while foodstuffs fell by 0.96 per cent, showing twice the decline of the preceding week.

Raw materials and finished goods fell by 0.52 and 0.74 per cent, respectively, last week, while semimanufactured goods rose by 0.14 per cent, to show rising price levels for two consecutive weeks. Grains, beef, coffee, butter, lard, pork and sugar were largely responsible for the sharp drop. Rising prices were found in cotton, eggs, potatoes, silk, copper and zinc.

Nonagricultural products rose by 0.28 per cent to 79.5, on the strength of higher prices in textiles, metals and chemicals. There were steady prices in miscellaneous commodities, and slightly lower prices in hides and leathers, fuels and building supplies.

The Money Illusion.

Because of the money illusion one of the principal causes of booms and panics is unperceived. Only after an economic and statistical analysis do we come to realize that trade fluctuations are caused, in large part, by changes in the buying power of the dollar.

BOND PRICES RISE FOR SECOND WEEK

GOVERNMENTS ARE WEAK

(Irving Fisher Service.)

The Index of 70 leading bonds on the New York Stock Exchange rose by 0.49 per cent last week, following a rise of 0.37 per cent for the preceding week. The decline early last week was slight, and rising prices for the final two sessions brought the index to 99.8 at last week's close, to show a gain of 1.4 per cent over the December 17 low of 98.4.

The first-grade rails and utilities groups showed increasing strength last week with gains of 1.8 and 0.8 per cent, respectively, compared with gains of 1.1 and 0.3 per cent for the preceding week. Second-grade rails and industrials, up by 0.4 and 0.2 per cent, respectively, each showed the marked drop in the rate of gain compared with the preceding week. Government issues were the weak spot in last week's bond market, U. S. Governments dropping by 0.02 per cent, while foreign government bonds dropped by 0.3 per cent.

At the close of 1930, considering the year's bull and bear markets, the price of all bonds was 0.3 per cent below the level at the opening of the year, while utilities were up by 1.9 per cent; U. S. Government bonds rose by 1.5 per cent; foreign government bonds declined by 0.4 per cent; industrials were off by 2.0 per cent, first-grade rails off by 3.9 per cent and second-grade rails off by 8.3 per cent.

WALL STREET GOSSIP

New York, Jan. 4 (A.P.).—Municipal bonds scheduled for award this week to tal $12,695,968, representing the needs of 35 communities, compared with municipal offerings of $8,965,000 last week, the Bond Buyer reports. The weekly average of new bond offerings by States and municipalities during 1930 was $30,036,316, compared with $32,582,790 for 1929 and $28,685,836 for 1928. An issue of $3,200,000 Buffalo, N. Y., bonds to be awarded Wednesday is the largest issue scheduled for the week.

United Founders Corporation has acquired voting control of United States Electric Power Corporation, an announcement by L. F. Seagrave, president of United Founders and chairman of the board of United States Electric Power Corporation, reports.

United States Electric Power, jointly with H. M. Byllesby & Co., controls, through Standard Power & Light Corporation, the Standard Gas & Electric System of utility properties, the total assets of which are in excess of $1,100,000,000.

The subsidiary and public utility companies of Standard Gas & Electric System supply electric light and power, gas, transportation, telephone, steam and water service in twenty States and 1,630 communities.

Holders of first mortgage, 50-year 4 per cent gold bonds, dated August 1, 1908, and maturing August 1, 1958, of Indiana Lighting Co., have been notified that the bonds have been called for redemption February 1. Upon surrender with all interest coupons maturing subsequqent to February 1, the principal will be paid with a premium of 2 per cent, together with accrued interest to February 1.

Commercial Factors Corporation reports the volume of business transacted during 1930 was $110,000,000, representing an increase of $12,000,000, or 11 per cent, over the previous year. The showing was made despite the fact that the textile fields in which it operates have been affected by the decline in commodity prices, and the statement points out that the record illustrates the results of the mergers and acquisitions which the corporation has brought about.

Standard "Pools" Foreign Branches

Oil Company Strengthens Operations Abroad by Move.

New York, Jan. 4 (A.P.).—The Standard Oil Co. of New Jersey has strengthened its operations abroad through the formation of International Co., Ltd., it became known today. In this new company has been consolidated all of the shipping activities of its subsidiaries in foreign waters.

The plan provides that bunkers and all other floating equipment of the company's seventeen subsidiaries in Europe become "pooled" into one organization and one management. This is believed to be the largest oil-carrying marine outfit on the other side of the Atlantic which is privately owned.

The lines on which International Co. will be operated are said to be similar to those of the Standard Shipping Co., representing several thousand oil tankers, barges and other equipment for oil commerce in American waters. Headquarters of the new company will be established in Lichtenstein, smallest principality in Europe.

Polish Envoy Dinner Host To De Lignes

Retiring Belgian Ambassador and Wife Are Sunday Guests.

BRILLIANT Sunday night dinners long have been a custom in Washington, and last night the Polish Ambassador and Mme. Filipowicz entertained a distinguished group in honor of the retiring Belgian Ambassador and Princess de Ligne, who will leave Wednesday for New York and thence sail for Europe.

Mme. Filipowicz returned to this country Friday on the De Grasse, which had been scheduled to arrive Wednesday, but was delayed in a storm. The ambassador, who had been waiting at New York to come to Washington with her, hastened back Thursday morning, on hearing the liner had been delayed, to attend the New Year Day receptions. He spent much time explaining the absence of Mme. Filipowicz, who had been heralded as making her first appearance at the White House Thursday morning.

At the Filipowicz dinner, besides the Prince and Princess de Ligne, were their two attractive daughters, who will be much missed by the younger set in Washington. A number of younger guests were invited for them. Other guests were:

The Norwegian Minister and Mme. Bachke, the Counselor of the Italian Embassy, Count Alberto Marchetti; the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. William R. Castle, jr., Mrs. Truxtun Beale, Mrs. Tracy Dows, Mrs. John W. Wilkins, Miss Katharine Wilkins, Col. Campbell B. Hodges, Mrs. Lawrence Townshend, Dr. and Mrs. Vernon Kellogg, Mr. William Phelps Eno, Mr. Theodore Marriner, Miss Mabel Boardman, Mr. and Mrs. John Philip Hill, the counselor of the embassy, Mr. Stanislaw Lepowski; the first secretary of the embassy, Mr. Victor Podoski; the commercial counselor, Mr. Witold Wankowicz, and the attaches, Mr. Jan Tomaszewski.

Dr. and Mrs. Lewis J. Battle have returned from passing the week-end in Richmond, where they attended the wedding reception Saturday of Miss Susanne Pollard, daughter of the Governor and Mrs. Pollard, and Mr. Herbert Lee Boatwright.

German Ambassador To See New Film.

The German Ambassador, Herr Friedrich von Prittwitz und Gaffron, will be the guest of honor at a film to be presented by the Bureau of Commercial Economics next Sunday evening, at 9 o'clock, in the Shoreham Hotel. Mr. John George Bucher, F. R. S., will speak and display the new film, "Along the Romantic Rhine."

Mrs. Mahlon Pitney, widow of Justice Pitney, will be at home Monday afternoon, January 12, at her home, 1763 R street.

Mrs. Claude C. Bloch, wife of the commandant of the navy yard, will not be at home at the navy yard today, but will be at home on Mondays hereafter.

Mr. Raymond Davis, American Consul at Rosario, Argentina, and Mrs. Davis sailed on the DeGrasse Saturday for Europe.

Mr. Horace Luttrell entertained at a small supper party last night for Mrs. Reginald Vanderbilt and Miss Marjorie Oelrichs, who came from New York for the occasion.

Supper-Dance Given At Club Chantecler.

Miss Anne Johnson entertained a party of ten, at the supper dance at the Club Chantecler Saturday evening. Others entertaining at the Chanteclar supper-dance were Mr. Hussein Foda, Mr. Richard Wallace, of Warrenton, Va.; Miss Elsa Ekengren and Mr. Ingham C. Mack.

Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Shelton entertained a small party at dinner at the Shoreham Saturday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Shelton have just returned to their Shoreham apartment from Bristol, Tenn., where they spent the holidays with Mrs. Shelton's mother, Mrs. C. L. Sevier. They now have as house guests their daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. J. Paul Weston, of New York.

Lady Lister-Kaye, who is spending the winter at the Ambassador Hotel in New York, arrived in Washington Saturday and is stopping at the Mayflower Hotel. Later she will go to Palm Beach.

Miss Winifred Strickland and Miss Patricia Shafer, who had been the guests during the holidays of Miss Sally Phinney, have returned to New York.

Pretty Capital Debutante

Mrs. Roosevelt Coming Home From Island

Widow Returning to Observe Anniversary of Husband's Death.

Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, widow of the former President, will return to her home at Oyster Bay tomorrow to observe the twelfth anniversary of the death of Col. Roosevelt and to receive the Roosevelt pilgrims who go annually to her husband's grave in Young's Memorial Cemetery. She arrives today on the Porto Rico liner San Lorenzo from San Juan, Porto Rico, where she went to pass the holidays with her son, Theodore Roosevelt, Governor of Porto Rico.

Choir From Baltimore To Give Concert Here.

The choir of Emmanuel Church, of Baltimore, directed by Dr. Frederick Louis Erickson, is to give a carol service for the Arts Club at 8:30 o'clock tomorow ervening in the Universalist National Memorial Church, at Sixteenth and S streets. Dr. Erickson is dean of the Chesapeake Chapter of the American Guild of Organists and a member of the faculty of the Peabody Conservatory at Baltimore. The program he is giving for the Arts Club contains numbers rarely heard.

The Friday Morning Music Club and the District of Columbia Chapter of the American Guild of Organists will be among the Arts Club guests on this occasion. The music committee of the Arts Club, of which Miss Sade C. Styron is chairman, will be the hosts.

Patrons and patronesses for the Georgetown music series whose second concert will take place January 9, in Christ Church Parish Hall, are Mr. and Mrs. Frank Bright, Mr. and Mrs. Fernando Cuniberti, Miss Lucea Hollerith, Mr. and Mrs. George A. King, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Leetch, Mr. and Mrs. Fulton Lewis, Mrs. Medill McCormick, Miss Lelia Mechlin, Admiral and Mrs. Spencer Wood, and Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Wyckoff.

A program will be offered in joint recital by Carrie and Ruby Potter. The next event, February 5, at 8:30 o'clock will be a concert by the Men's Glee Club of the American University.

This will close this season's events of the first year of the organization of the Georgetown music series. Management for the concerts has been taken care of by Miss Mary Madge Wilkins, of Georgetown.

Episcopalian Women Of Diocese to Meet

The Woman's Auxiliary of the Protestant Episcopal Church, Diocese of Washington, will hold its annual meeting tomorrow at St. John's Church. Holy Communion will be celebrated by Bishop James E. Freeman at 10 o'clock. After the service the Rev. Claude Pickens, missionary to China, will address the session.

The Rev. Charles Warner will discuss the Bishop Payne Divinity School, conducted under the auspices of the American Church Institute for Negroes, at 2 o'clock. A business meeting will complete the program.

Two Aviatrices Start Endurance Mark Try

Los Angeles, Jan. 4 (A.P.).—Bobby Trout, Los Angeles aviatrix, and Edna May Cooper, former screen actress, began their second attempt to set a women's endurance flight record at 2:30 p. m. (P. S. T.) today.

Miss Trout piloted her monoplane Lady Rolph into the air from the municipal airport. A previous attempt New Year's Day ended quickly when the refueling plane was unable to function.

Round-World Aviator Forced Down in Texas

Abilene, Tex., Jan. 4 (A.P.).—Barclay Warburton, jr., on a round-the-world aerial and water jaunt, was forced down here by bad weather today. He had taken off from Dallas this morning with El Paso or Tucson, Ariz., his night goal.

Cushion Comfort

Between 20 and 40 times a night we change our sleeping positions. (Average 33.) Elbows, shoulders, hips must burrow out a new place to rest.

Old flattened-out mattresses are cruelly unaccommodating—causing fitful slumber—wakefulness—jangled nerves. But a coil-spring mattress "gives" to the slightest pressure—cushions every curve. You don't wake up every time you move. Let us use the material in your old sleep-racketeering mattress to make for you this new sleep-producing kind. Sterilized, cleaned, covered with charming new ticking, it is really a new mattress. The cost—only $12.50 to $22.50. The work done in one day. Phone National 9410.

Fifth Ave. Fashions
NEW YORK

The bodice with deep V is always slimming, and doubly so with a cross-over vest. The upward curved seam-line of the snug yoke conceals hip breadth. The circular skirt displays graceful fullness toward the hem.

Negre brown crepy woolen with gold pin dots made the original. Plain brown was used for the vest and bows.

Style No. 939 may be had in sizes 16, 18, 20 years, 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48 and 50 inches bust.

Canton crepe, marocain crepe, tweed and velvet may also be used for this slim model.

What wages home-making

Every woman knows that by doing her own housework she saves real money for her family. But she saves more on some tasks than she does on others. Making a silk dress, for instance, saves more than baking bread.

But even a woman hasn't time to do all the baking and making a household demands. Some things must be bought ready made—some jobs done by others.

The work of shopping is the most valuable service a housewife performs. More money is saved in wise buying than in any other home-making occupation. The woman who goes to market and personally selects the food she buys, saves more than in any other home job.

MORE TREASURY RAIDS.

Attempts to make political capital out of the unemployment and drought situation will be resumed today. Determined efforts will be made to set up a method of feeding the public directly from the Treasury, without regard to a deficit or an increase in taxation. Ingenious schemes for raiding the Treasury, ostensibly in behalf of the unemployed, are pending in the Senate and House, and more will be offered. At least fifty proposals of this nature are before Congress.

The political motive of most of these proposals is very apparent. "Statesmen" who face formidable opposition in their States and districts are eager to assume the role of champions of the unemployed. They try to make it appear that the administration's estimates of unemployment and the sums required for relief are utterly inadequate; that vast numbers of individuals are starving; that the administration is callous to human suffering; that the emergency is such as to warrant the brushing aside of the Red Cross, to the end that the Treasury may furnish food and other necessaries at once, regardless of deficits and increased taxes.

Steadfast common sense and nonpartisan cooperation are necessary in both houses of Congress in order to block these raids. Democrats and Republicans must join hands against the raiders if this emergency is to be dealt with effectively while protecting the public revenue. It is so easy to inflame the public with starvation scares that there is danger of massing a mistaken public demand behind the proposed raids. The administration is placed in a difficult position when it insists upon prudence as well as promptness in dealing with distress. It is instantly accused of heartlessness and incapacity. In its program of relief the administration has a right to expect the support of majorities in both branches of Congress.

Some of the manifestations of distress reported from the drought districts have the earmarks of carefully prepared propaganda designed to justify raids upon the Treasury. In some cases individuals claiming to be starving were exposed as hoarders of food. The Red Cross managers must be on the alert to detect swindlers.

Unless Federal relief measures are made proportionate to the state of the Treasury there will be increased taxation. That is an evil dreaded by every individual and every community. The renewed spirit of determination to push forward toward better times deserves encouragement instead of the deadly blow of needless taxation. Congress will be a faithless servant if it fritters away public money in socialistic schemes of public feeding and then exorts increased sums from hard-pressed taxpayers.

If the Red Cross lacks sufficient funds to feed those who have been stricken by the drought, let it appeal to the public. The people will not suffer any one to starve if they are advised in time to contribute needed funds. The setting up of extraordinary Federal agencies to feed the hungry would be a foolish extra expense and would entail great delay. The Red Cross stands organized and ready to act in behalf of the Nation.

The forthcoming attempt to sweep Congress off its feet by exaggeration of public distress will furnish a test of the stamina and common sense of members of both political parties.

POWER BOARD POLICY.

Employes of the old Federal Power Commission, who were automatically dismissed when the new commission was organized, have been invited to apply for reappointment. The invitation attracts public attention only because of the controversy over the dismissal of Charles A. Russell, former solicitor, and William V. King, former accountant. Insurgent leaders in the Senate are threatening to reconsider the confirmation of members of the commission who are responsible for ousting these two favorites.

Does the Power Commission imply by this offer that applications from Russell and King would be considered? At the time they were dismissed Chairman George Otis Smith made it plain that their reappointment was not contemplated. They were dismissed, along with the executive secretary, F. E. Bonner, so that the commission might start with a clean slate. This was apparently the intention of Congress in creating the new body, for it was given authority to appoint, prescribe the duties and fix the salaries of its secretary, chief engineer, general counsel, solicitor and chief accountant.

It has been rumored that the commissioners under fire are seeking a compromise with the insurgents who are threatening them, but such reports are unbelievable. The commission has made known to the public that it can not work satisfactorily with the men who were storm centers of the old organization. Should those men be reinstated at the behest of a clique of insurgent senators the commission would be made ridiculous. Public confidence in it would be shattered. Its usefulness would be at an end. It is unthinkable that the commission would risk public contempt in that manner.

The commission has done nothing that Congress did not authorize and direct it to do. It was lawfully reorganized and has entered upon its duties, and therefore is no longer subject to the whims of senators. The Senate has no power to remove them under the pretense of revoking their confirmation.

If the Power Commission holds firmly to its mandate to inaugurate a new era in the administration of the Federal water power act, this scrabble will probably prove to be a boomerang to the would-be intimidators.

SIMPLIFYING COURT PROCEDURE.

The layman is not much interested in the details of the arrangement to facilitate trials before the District Supreme Court, but the fact that the procedure has been simplified is good news to every one. Delay has been the bane of judicial procedure ever since the intricate system of modern jurisprudence came into use. The changes which are to be introduced in the District courts are designed to eliminate numerous causes of delay, thus speeding up the work of the courts and reducing the cost of litigation.

Coordination, which is one of the first principles of business efficiency, is to be introduced in the courts. A motions and assignment commissioner will take over the business of getting litigation before all the courts. Judges will be relieved of much routine work that has heretofore taken their time. Cases in all the courts will be pooled, and it will be possible to estimate with some degree of accuracy how many cases the entire court system will handle in a day. In this way the time wasted by lawyers, litigants and witnesses in waiting for their cases to be heard will be minimized.

These improvements are the result of a broad study of judicial systems by a committee of Washington lawyers and jurists. They are to be highly commended for their work. They will reap benefits from the expedited procedure, but these benefits will also extend to the entire community.

BUTCHERY OF THE CONSTITUTION.

Thus far the House has prevented Congress from making a fool of itself by proposing to the States a constitutional amendment ostensibly intended to abolish the "lame duck" sessions, but in reality upsetting the machinery that insures the orderly and certain installation of a President. The House heretofore has refused to concur in the Norris amendment. It is to act upon this amendment again, which was revived by the Senate during the late extra session.

The plan to call a new Congress in session in the January succeeding the election can not be effected without an amendment to the Constitution, because the terms of members do not begin until March 4. The Norris amendment proposes to change the terms of senators and representatives to begin January 4 instead of March 4. The terms of the President and Vice President would begin January 24.

The House can not organize until it elects a Speaker and adopts rules. Sometimes several weeks have been consumed in the election of a Speaker. Yet the Norris amendment allows only 20 days in which the House would be expected to elect a Speaker, adopt rules, join the Senate in canvassing the electoral vote, elect a President in the event of failure of the Electoral College to choose a President, and declare the result. The proposed arrangement, if it went no further, would invite the danger and disaster of a vacancy in the Presidency.

The amendment goes further, however, by proposing the device of a temporary President, a man not elected by the people or by the House, but designated by Congress. The clause reads as follows:

> If the House of Representatives has not chosen a President, whenever the right of choice devolves upon them, before the time fixed for the beginning of his term, then the Vice President shall act as President, as in the case of the death or other constitutional disability of the President. The Congress shall by law provide for the case of the failure to choose the Vice President before the time fixed for the beginning of his term, declaring what officer shall then act as President, and such officer shall act accordingly until the House of Representatives chooses a President or until the Senate chooses a Vice President.

Thus there is opened up the possibility of three Presidents within a few days—an officer chosen to fill in while the House chooses a President; a Vice President, chosen by the Senate before the House chooses a President; and finally a President chosen by the House.

If a Vice President should take the Presidency, because of the failure of the House to organize in time to canvass the vote, or to elect a President, he would be entitled to remain President until the end of the term, according to the Norris amendment, which provides that he shall act "as in the case of the death or other constitutional disability of the President." But the amendment also contemplates that a President elected by the House would claim his office. Thus, if a deadlock in a Republican House should delay the choice of a President, the Senate might elect a Democratic or insurgent Vice President, who might take the Presidency and then refuse to quit office upon the demand of a Republican President subsequently chosen by the House.

This butchery of the Constitution is proposed by Mr. Norris, of Nebraska. His proposal has actually passed the Senate, which is a commentary upon modern statesmanship. The amendment is now offered to the House, under the pretense that it is merely a plan to abolish lame-duck sessions of Congress.

PLAIN BRITISH SPEECH

By Sir HERBERT RUSSELL,
In Naval and Military Record.

The primary presumption is that America will be neutral in sea warfare. She wants to dictate the rules of neutrality. In brief, she wants to maintain her own commercial interests, probably improve them, and she wants a supreme navy to insure that she shall be in a position to do so. Well, these are practical politics, if not particularly heroic. But other nations have their standpoint, too, none more antagonistic to the American view than our own.

Admittedly, our own standpoint has become ingrained from the usage of centuries. The idea that "Britannia rules the waves" implies the capacity to enforce our standpoint, whether it be right or wrong. Siege is one of the oldest methods known in warfare, and naval blockade is but a sea siege. In the jargon of the day we call it "economic pressure." War on the modern scale would be an interminable affair if it were to be determined by the conflict of well-fed, well-munitioned armed forces, with well-nourished nations behind them. Sheer exhaustion of wealth might ultimately end it, for neutrals would not go on trading with the poorer side, unable to pay. Our view of war—and the view of all the great nations into whose histories war has entered so largely—is that we do not want it to be an interminable business. We want to get through with it as rapidly as possible, and there is only one way of doing this—the way of a outrance.

Freedom of the seas would make war easier for our people at the price of prolonging it beyond calculation. Regarding war in all its hideous seriousness, we ask ourselves whether we lose more by allowing the enemy to intercept our trade than we gain by intercepting his trade. In this age of submarines and high-speed surface raiders there can be but one answer; we lose much more. But if we can endure beyond the point when the shadow of famine begins to darken the land we may hope to reach victory, owing to the much greater destructive efforts which we should anticipate from our superior naval power. This sounds rather paradoxical. But in the great war Germany destroyed infinitely more sea-borne commerce destined for this country than we destroyed sea-borne commerce destined for Germany. We thus lost much more in this way than she did, yet we were able to endure when she collapsed, not wholly from inanition, but very nearly so. In launching her unrestricted submarine campaign against us, Germany definitely hoped to reduce us to peace terms—to her peace terms, of course—by hunger. In our own blockade of Germany we hoped to reduce her to peace terms by general physical exhaustion, in which hunger would certainly play a very prominent, if not the whole, part. It is no use to mince matters; methods differed with circumstances, but ruthlessness was the principle on both sides when the two nations had got their backs to the wall and struggled for existence.

And thus it is with regard to the freedom of the seas. President Hoover says that it is barbarous to starve noncombatants in war. So it is. But since it is impossible to put down a ring fence, and say that hostilities must only be carried on within it, clearly you can not feed noncombatants without also feeding combatants. President Hoover must perfectly well know that the American people need never fear famine in the event of a war. Therefore, he can only be attempting to lay down a humane code for other nations not so fortunately circumstanced. America might feed those other nations and supply them in various directions. This would either be humanity or profiteering, according to the point of view. But whichever we may call it, the result would be the same; it would indefinitely prolong the war. America is at war against intemperance; she denies the freedom of the seas for the benefit of those perfectly reasonable people who like a little drop of something neither "soft" nor flatulent.

In the past this country has never been confronted by a neutral so powerful as to be able to dictate the principle of trading with the enemy. Our navy has always been of such strength as to be able to maintain blockade. Twentieth-century socialism is changing all this, and quite ecstatically surrendering the trident to the United States. There is no "bunk" about American principles in relation to peace or war. It is "America first and the rest nowhere." This is a fine sentiment—for Americans. But it means that other people's wars must not interfere with American business with those peoples. This is the real gist of the demand for freedom of the seas. In peace time it can all be put into conventions, treaties, pacts, and all the rest of the gold-fountain pen, horn-rimmed documents. In the deadly struggle of modern war no nation is going to accept defeat because of scraps of paper. America quite realises this, and so she wants the most powerful navy in the world. In other words, her conception of the freedom of the seas appears to be supremacy on the seas to enable her to carry on "business as usual."

FIGHTING RACKETEERING.

President Hoover and Representative Summers, of Texas, ranking Democrat on the judiciary committee, agree that the States should be able to put down racketeering without the help of the National Government. Mr. Summers calls on the citizens to arouse themselves from their lethargy, says the Red Wing Eagle. It seems queer to President Hoover that the only way to get at some of these fellows is to charge them with failure to pay income taxes. The United States has recently fought a war in which it aroused the admiration of the world for its military power and public energy. It would seem extremely strange if it can not put down the little bands of gangsters who now terrorize certain cities.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST.

THE FOOLISH SMART.

They called him smart; so swiftly did he run,
So easily his daily tasks were done.
While others toiled and plodded through the day
He cut the corners to make short the way;
Learned all the tricks by which are fortunes made
And reached the top but never trudged the grade.

They called him smart, for so he seemed to be,
He'd cut the Gordian knot of industry.
Offhand he spoke his every "yes" and "no."
"For men who stop to think," he said, "are slow.
While they are wrapped in thought the chance is gone.

They called him smart, but fate has brought him down;
For him with warrants now they search the town.
It now appears he cut too deep and wide
The toilsome corners where man's strength is tried.
To beat the game he played the trickster's part,
But only those who play the game are smart.

You Never See "Wiggletails" in Water That Is Going Somewhere.

By ROBERT QUILLEN

If sewage and factory waste are poured into a stagnant pool the water becomes permanently foul. Time can not cleanse it, and the only change is for the worse.

Running water, however, purifies itself. Sewage and waste can befoul it for a moment, but a beneficent natural law operates to neutralize all impurities and make the water clean again as it flows.

It is a wise and good law that thus rewards the progress of a stream, and its manifestations are not limited to water.

A little child develops habits that annoy and dismay inexperienced parents, to whom each new development seems permanent, but in a day or a week these habits are outgrown and new ones are developed to take their place.

So all through childhood and youth the follies and faults that seem to threaten permanent injury are overcome by the process of growth, until at last the child reaches a sane and wholesome maturity despite the prophets of evil.

Here anxiety ends, but it is precisely here that danger begins. While growth continued, life was a stream that purified itself. Now that growth has ended, life may become a stagnant pool that retains every impurity.

If you spent your childhood and youth in a small town and then went out into the world to make your fortune, meeting new people, absorbing new ideas, learning new standards, and then returned to visit your old home, were you not astonished and a little shamed by the petty interests and foolish feuds and silly standards that had survived there while you were outgrowing them in another environment?

Left in that stagnant water, you would have shared its narrowness and ignorance and stupid prejudices. Travel saved you. If you are a wiser and broader man than those you left behind, the contrast is not due to any inherent superiority in yourself. Movement developed you, and you outgrew the faults of your background.

There is no compromise with nature's laws. When water no longer flows, it pays the penalty of stagnation. When a man no longer grows, his faults and follies become fixtures.

Travel no longer is necessary, for there are books in which one may find fodder for the mind's development. But this much is certain, whether you have a background of bucolic ignorance or academic brilliance; the moment you quit growing, your opportunity to purge yourself of impurities is gone.

If a new idea shocks you, scum is forming on the pool to shut out the light.

PRO AND CON

Houston Post Dispatch.

The Wall Street Journal properly remarks that, for several days before holiday adjournment, individual members of the United States Senate put the finishing touches upon another chapter in the long history of that body's decline in prestige and diminution in real power. "Reasons for its present low estate are palpable enough. On Saturday the Senate fell headlong into acrimonious discussion of a shabby political incident that had nothing to do with any business before it." And to make matters worse, it appears that the unseemly quarrel is to be resumed immediately the senators get back to business, apparently unmindful of the fact that they were sent there for other purposes than indulging "in these sorry displays of party scandals," as the Journal puts it. The people may hope for not much relief until the personnel of that body is weeded of some of its purely partisan-minded, to substitution by a brand of statesmanship like that which North Carolina has recently contributed.

Same Old Politics.

Topeka Capital.

Thomas Jefferson when President originated the saying that "few die and none resign." But Judge Clark, of New Jersey, in his antiprohibition decision goes further back and quotes a saying of Confucius: "How can a man serve the prince? When out of office, his sole object is to obtain it; and when he has attained it, his only anxiety is to hold it. In his unprincipled dread of losing it he will readily go all lengths." Politics doesn't change much over a period of 2,500 years.

Never Again.

Louisville Courier Journal.

Senator Borah is urging an extra session of Congress, but he argued the President into this once.

"Everybody Happy."

Louisville Courier Journal.

It is Senator Moses' opinion that Bob Lucas will not be fired from his job as executive director of the national republican committee and Senator Norris will not be fired from the Republican party, thus preserving the status quo. And "we all may be happy yet"—with the exception of the Republicans who demand the head of Norris and the Republicans who demand the head of Lucas, not forgetting the Republican in the White House, who can find no happiness in any angle of the Lucas-Norris case.

He Will Learn.

Minneapolis Journal.

Dr. John Dewey, American philosopher, now engaged in forming a third party, is going to learn more about political philosophy before he gets organized sufficiently to carry Norris and Nebraska.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

Senator Norris Should Demand National Election of Senators—This Would Rule Him Out.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If Senator Norris is sincere in his intention to submit an amendment to the Constitution which will enable the people to elect a President by popular vote, why does he not go a step further and suggest an amendment which would also make the election of members of the Congress dependent upon the popular vote of all the people?

The election of senators and representatives by popular vote of all the States instead of by the several States as is now done, would be more beneficial to the Nation as a whole than would the election of a President by that method, because Congress, and not the President, makes the laws.

This proposition will no doubt be objected to on the ground that the several States are entitled to designate the persons who shall represent them in Congress, but this objection can easily be overcome by providing that each State nominate two candidates for each member of Congress and then let one of such candidates be elected by popular vote of all the people. This method would insure to each State the election of one of its candidates, and at the same time would safeguard the interest of the people of all the States for whom the Congress speaks.

It would also mean that such radicals as Senator Norris would never be elected. This feature alone is quite sufficient to recommend this change and to insure its quick adoption.

A DEMOCRAT.

Objects to Transforming the Mall Into Parking Space and Filling Stations.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: One of your correspondents, writing about the parking problem of the Government building triangle, mentions the Mall in that connection. He seems to agree that perhaps it might be advisable "to carry out the scheme for cutting down the trees and changing the Mall in its entire extent into a Government parking park." No doubt there are officials who have already figured out how to utilize the Mall to the best advantage for parking purposes.

Permit me, Mr. Editor, to put in a vigorous protest against any such desecration. Man and boy, I have enjoyed the comfort, as well as the beauty, of the Mall for many years in all seasons, and I am only one among thousands of our citizens who would regret to see it covered with automobiles instead of grass and trees.

How about the appearance of the costly buildings that are being erected on the Government triangle? They will not stand out nearly as fine as intended if their surroundings are not in keeping. I can't imagine how anybody could think of fencing them in with parking plots, garages, and gasoline stations.

EDWARD JENKINS.

Suggests a Life-Saving Fender on Automobiles.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In view of the tens of thousands of persons killed annually by automobiles, I believe it will be admitted that no means of saving human lives should be neglected. I, therefore, propose that every motor vehicle should be equipped with a fender, expressly designed to save the lives of pedestrians. Most of the street railways in the United States are, if I remember rightly, equipped with such life-saving fenders, designed to pick up, with as little injury as possible, any person who may be struck, and carry him (or her) until the car can be stopped. The fender at present used by automobiles is, on the contrary, intended only to preserve the car itself from injury. It is practically nothing but a steel bar; and must be very efficient in breaking a pedestrian's leg at the knee, or fracturing a little child's skull.

I was struck by such a fender four years ago in Chicago. My knee ligaments were torn and I am permanently lamed.

BERTRAND SHADWELL.
Basle, Switzerland.

Westerner Who Wonders What Has Become of Men Sent to Washington.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We hear a great deal about the farmers needing Government aid. In fact, most all the candidates rode in to Washington by being elected on promising farmers all kinds of aid. That was good dope for a candidate, but what we need just now is aid for the unemployed throughout the large cities and congested districts. The farmers will take care of themselves when they realize that they will have to work as they did in early days.

We have too many modern ways. We can never farm the entire country with tractors and automobiles, and we can not eliminate the horse-drawn plows.

Out West we try to send good men to Washington to represent us, but the most we hear of them is that they are having a hard time to get into "society."

Conscientious Artists Injured When Outrageous Pieces Are Exhibited.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Harry B. Bradford's letter in The Post of January 2, criticizing the recent exhibit of "American artists" in the Corcoran Gallery, is very welcome to at least one layman, and probably to thousands of others.

Mr. Bradford is not the only one who wonders what is the use of art study "if it is all to be prostituted in painting such trash as many of the paintings now exhibited, which might have been done in an insane asylum."

By failing to use courage in rejecting art outrages the committee in charge has done great damage by disgusting patrons who would ordinarily be generous in supporting conscientious artists.

The Navy soon will be steaming down both coasts of continental United States to Panama for the 1931 fleet concentration.

The scouting fleet of the Atlantic, comprising sleek, fast cruisers and destroyers, will join the battle fleet of the Pacific, composed of mighty dreadnaughts—the battleships and aircraft carriers of the fleet.

The two wings of the fleet will come together early in February at Panama where the government was overturned last week. From February 12 to March 24 fleet concentration will be held. A naval air concentration will take place in the Caribbean from March 24 to April 3.

While Secretary Adams looks on, an attacking force under Admiral Frank H. Schofield, commanding the battle fleet, will attempt to establish an advance base on the mainland, defended by Vice Admiral A. L. Willard, commander of the scouting fleet.

Defense of Canal Problem.

The problem, involving defense of the Panama Canal, will be under the general direction of Admiral Jehu V. Chase, commander in chief of the United States fleet.

"Air forces will play a more important part than ever before. The Los Angeles, giant Navy dirigible, will be used for the first time as a military weapon. Long scouting trips and reconnaisance comprise the essential work of the airship. A total of 273 planes will participate in the mock warfare.

"The most extensive air concentration ever held by the Navy will assemble in the Caribbean near Guantanamo, Cuba. During both the concentration of sea and air forces, the aircraft carriers Saratoga and Lexington will be assigned to the scouting fleet.

"In the air problem naval patrol planes attached to the scouting fleet, and occupying a theoretical advanced base in the West Indies, will scout for enemy naval forces in the Caribbean.

137 Ships Under One Command.

"Admiral Chase will have under his consolidated command a majority of the vessels of both the scouting and the battle fleets. He will supervise maneuvers of 137 ships, accommodating 273 planes, with personnel of 2,600 officers and 33,000 enlisted men.

"The movement southward begins on January 10, when units of the scouting fleet will leave their East Coast bases en route to Guantanamo Bay, Cuba, whence they will proceed on February 8 to the Canal Zone. Units of the battle fleet will leave West Coast bases February 5, en route to Panama.

"Secretary Adams and his naval aid, Capt. H. R. Stark, accompanied by Admiral William V. Pratt, chief of naval operations, and his aid, Lieut. C. W. A. Campbell, will make the trip south aboard a battleship. David S. Ingalls, Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Air, will fly to Panama via the coastal route, with his naval aid, Lieut. Comdr. R. P. Molten, accompanying in a second plane.

POPE TO EMPHASIZE STAND ON MARRIAGE

Catholics to prevent pleas for annulment.

It is also taken for granted there will be a restatement of the old law against marriages within the fourth degree of relationship.

Heretofore, dispensations from this have been fairly easily obtainable for Catholic royalties—on whose unions the Pope himself normally is accustomed to pass, but henceforth, it is predicted, such "cousin marriages" as that of Princess Anne of France and the Duke of Apulia of Italy, in 1937, will be most difficult, if not impossible, to contract with the church's approval.

Concerned About Children.

The imperiled physical heritage of the children of such unions is said to be uppermost in the Pope's mind.

"Such marriages have been common for centuries among Catholic royal houses and Catholic aristocracies of Europe, in order to unite old families and coordinate estates and families.

"Another point the Pope is expected to make is insistence that all Catholics contracting matrimony in church be in "the state of grace" necessary for reception of one of the church's seven sacraments, namely, having been confessed and absolved of sins before going to the altar.

"Hitherto, many born Catholics who acquired agnostic views have been enabled to have marriages celebrated with all rites of the church by the simple expedient of explaining their conscientious scruples against confessing themselves, and receiving a letter from the priest saying that he had "heard them in confession," this being taken by the officiant at the marriage as prima facie evidence that the prospective spouse has complied with the church's regulations.

To Be Issued in English.

"Now, however, it is believed the Pope will demand that all who would enter upon matrimony according to the church's usage not only must receive the sacrament of confession before that of matrimony, but also must partake of communion at a nuptial mass, demonstrating publicly that they are practicing Catholics.

"For the first time in Vatican history, modern language texts of the forthcoming encyclical will be issued simultaneously with the Latin text. Papal staff translaters have been working overtime to provide versions in English, French, Italian, Spanish, German and other languages.

Greek Towns Damaged By Severe Earth Shocks

Athens, Jan. 4 (A.P.).—Severe earth shocks caused damage in several villages today, but no lives were lost.

At Corinth all old houses left standing after the earthquake of early last year collapsed. Residents of the town became panic-stricken and refused to enter their homes. Ten houses and a church collapsed at Assos, six miles from Corinth, and some damage was caused at Loutraki.

Burmese and Chinese Resume Riots; Six Die

Rangoon, Burma, Jan. 4 (A.P.).—In a renewal of rioting between Burmese and Chinese in West Rangoon today, 6 persons were killed and 33 injured.

Numerous minor clashes occurred throughout the day and the total of injured and dead in the two days of rioting is estimated at 75. Authorities said steps would be taken to prevent a spread of the rioting.

WOOD GETS FIRST TASTE OF FIGHTING WITH INDIANS

nent features and freckles of large dimensions. He wore a "seersucker" suit, loosely woven, which had shrunk or which he had outgrown, for his arms emerged unduly from the sleeves, his huge thighs filled the abbreviated trousers and the coat fitted so tightly over the deep chest that the buttons were stretching the buttonholes. He looked the picture of the unsophisticated country boy on his first visit to the city.

He was indeed mortally homesick. He rose at country hours and wandered aimlessly around the Public Gardens, waiting for the restaurants of this stately and complacent city to open. When at last they let him in he did not like the looks of them and finding the menus mysterious ate oyster stew meal after meal, that being a dish a Cape Cod boy knew something about.

It is a noble corner of creation which Wood has chosen for his initial venturing. In the decrepit old building, where at times plaster falls on the unwary, a group of magnificent spirits, brilliant and truehearted, build men and teach them healing.

Oliver Wendell Holmes, with his bushy eyebrows, his twinkling eyes, is the best beloved. Day by day with quip and jibe, with startling similes and golden imagery, the scientist who is a wit, the poet who is a philosopher, the doctor, too sensitive to suffering to practice medicine, shakes up the dry bones of anatomy until somehow they make music. He is, for all his sparkle, his gay departures from the subject at hand, a solid scholar and a painstaking teacher. But even as he satisfies the mind, he is seeking always to approach the heart.

Bigelow Dominant Force.

"Uncle Oliver" is the most picturesque and alluring figure on the faculty, but Henry J. Bigelow is the dominant force. "Bigsy," as they call him, is 6 feet of elegant, willowy manhood, a Chesterfield of all the graces; able, dashing, brilliant; the leader of the conservative element in the school, which is fighting the innovations of the young president, Charles W. Eliot, who, in Dr. Holmes' happy phrase, has turned Harvard University over "like a flapjack." He fights Eliot every inch of the way and loses, but he makes him show the reason for every move he makes and even in obstruction does his part in Eliot's own work.

In the shadow which the great lights throw there is a humbler figure in the medical school, not mentioned in the catalogue, who from the basement provides the intellects upstairs with the reviving touch of earth. He is "Jim" Skillen, the janitor. Skillen is a philosopher and in his way a teacher, too; a massive being with shaggy hair, bushy eyebrows and a vigorous beard, reddish gray, and a back like an ambulant piano box. For a generation he has watched over the medical school. He keeps order and tolerates no loafing or tardiness, and day in, day out, he watches the students and makes his observations, warning here, encouraging there.

Leonard Wood comes early under his scrutiny. The janitor wants a live mink for a collection of animals he is making and Wood volunteers to get him one on the cape. On a week-end at home he captures a lively specimen. The animal escapes and as Wood catches him, bites him through the hand, but Wood holds fast and brings him to the school. "Jim" Skillen grunts and delivers a prophecy. "Any one who's got grit enough to hang on to a mink is going to git there."

Wood liked the school. It demanded hard work, but he was used to that. The studies, as Bigelow himself explained, were so arranged in order and amount that a student not only could acquire all the education he needed, but was compelled to acquire a good deal of it if he entertained any ambition to pass the examinations. The teaching was by lectures, illuminated by recitations, at the school itself and in the amphitheaters of the Massachusetts General Hospital and the Boston City Hospital, most of whose staff officers were professors at the school. Wood's grades had their ups and downs, with 88 (against a passing mark of 50) in medical chemistry and 86 in anatomy, pulling a general average staggering under a 55 in clinical medicine, a 56 in "theory and practice" and 59 in general chemistry and obstetrics. Clinical surgery brought him 82. But his handwriting brought a blast from his step-grandfather.

"If you undertake to make a letter, make it and not make something else, and be careful about spelling your words right. Your profession requires a plain, correct handwriting. Lawyers like to write so that you can make anything of it, but this will not answer for prescriptions. * * * 10 cents will buy you a copybook to practice from. Your grandmother says you have not time to write well. God made you and gave you all the time there is."

Wood revealed at the medical school as at Middleborough a sound, rather than a brilliant mind. He was seventh in his class at the end of the first year and fourth at the end of the second. More significant, he was building a personality and a spirit as well as training a brain. His shyness gradually evaporated and a certain self-distrust in assertion, if not in action, gave way to a sense of power which was evident behind the unpretentious manner. What also revealed itself quite unexpectedly to observers, was a gay exuberance, an abundance of what the elder generation called "youthful spirits." He was, in his lights and shades, different from most of his classmates, more colorful, more fiercely energetic; with an open mind, a cool head; loyal to his friends; chuckling easily, laughing seldom, talking in a low, steady voice, talking frankly and talking little.

Recreations Athletics.

The recreations of the group with which Wood ran were athletic rather than social, but when they were social they had a tendency to take on a Gargantuan aspect. The most festive of them centered upon an institution which the Latin greyhound, Ramon Guiteras, founded early in their third year for the relaxation of mutually congenial souls. It grew out of informal gatherings at Meusie's, an old French restaurant on Hayward place, and by an inspiration, diabolically brilliant, was called the Cadiac Society with a grand chief vagus as presiding officer. Wood, whose congeniality pierced slowly the incrustations of Cape Cod, was a late addition, but the dinner at which he, as the youngest member, supplied the cigars and the beverages, proved remarkable beyond all others. It was held at Taft's Restaurant at Point Shirley on Boston Harbor and they all drove out in a coach and four with Guiteras as whip. Taft's was famous for "Owls of the North," and other fixings, and the drive out was safer for all concerned than the drive home. Wood was generally the most sober of men, but that night it took the cobined efforts of a Princeton football player, a crack Harvard oarsman and the boxing champion of New England to put him to bed.

Wood finished his work at the Medical School in June, 1883, and in a competitive examination won a place as junior house officer in the Boston City Hospital.

Its superintendent, Dr. G. H. M. Rowe, was one of the best hospital managers in the country, honest, devoted to his institution, kind at bottom, but fussy, irascible and stubborn and a strict disciplinarian.

He had taken over the management of the hospital at a time when its discipline was relaxed, and was determined to build up and sustain its morale. No youngster was long at the hospital before Dr. Rowe found occasion to give him the castigation which he regarded as an essential part of a young man's training. Wood took his with fire in his eyes. Discipline of this sort, any discipline other than that which his own sense of the proprieties imposed, was new to him, and he did not like it.

During the first summer of his service, however, he had few contacts with the superintendent. He was officially an "ophthalmic externe," but he was permitted also to take general calls in the North End from patients too ill to come to the dispensary. The slums opened their doors to him, revealing a world of which Cape Cod never dreamed.

Shook Up His Ideas.

"For the last four months," he wrote Jessie Haskell in November, 1883, "I have been doing a good deal of dispensary work down in the rough parts of the city, having made about 2,000 visits. I thought I knew something of crime and poverty before, but I found that I had not even an idea of the true state of affairs.

"It is an experience which teaches many things, among others not to complain at trifles. Truly, one with as light a pocket as usual—and that's saying a good deal—could go home and rejoice that he had enough to eat and a bed to sleep on. You can't imagine the misery, crime and suffering in a great city. Dickens' wildest flights are but too true. At first one distrusts every one, but not long. I have no finer friends in the world than among some of the worst people in the city." I sometimes think, indeed I know, that it must have been circumstances, not disposition, which made them what they are. It rather shakes up a fellow's settled ideas, though."

When in the autumn Wood became junior interne on the second surgical service, he was already conspicuous among the house officers, admired and liked by the majority for his strength, his wit, his abounding spirits; and cordially hated by a few. His vigorous body made nothing of long hours, and his fertile mind ran to meet the problems which, in a municipal institution, devoted only to acute cases, were constantly presenting themselves. He was, it was said, the first to suggest colonic anesthesia in operations upon the face and neck, which was tried experimentally on animals and later employed in the operating room. He made valuable suggestions for the after care of operative cases, which were adopted in large part by the attending members of the visiting staff on his service.

In the treatment of fracture he appeared to understand better than any of the older members of the staff the application of mechanical principles of treatment, such as traction in overriding fragments and securing more complete immobility; to be able to conceive practical devices which would contribute to the comfort of the patients. He was quick to comprehend and to act, and, as one of his associates said, always prepared for an emergency. The visiting surgeons spoke well of him and were fond of him. But Dr. Rowe told him that he kept his records abominably, adding that he had never known an interne who kept records badly to amount to anything in later life.

Objected to Too Many Rules.

The fact was that the air of the hospital was charged with rules and regulations which Wood thought ridiculous; and he made a point of breaking them. He was late to meals occasionally—shades of the old Pocasset freedom! He did not always sit in the seat assigned him; he reprimanded a nurse when he thought she needed reprimanding; he was more sociable than need be with others, going so far as to partake of a milk punch now and again during the witching hours in the service room of the nurses, or taking a turn with one or the other on the street. Most of the house officers did these things, of course, but others kept a weather eye cocked for the night superintendent.

He pestered the rather heavy young man who was senior house officer and whose solemn conscientiousness irritated Wood's gay-hearted exuberance; breaking rules for no reason except to horrify him and commenting in tones of admiration to the visiting surgeon on some operation of the senior which had obviously been a little less than skillful. The senior came to detest Wood all the more because he did his teasing with so much charm that all the other house officers loved him for it.

All this was bad enough, but what was worse was the manner in which he took the consequent admonitions. He was entirely amenable to criticism from his medical chiefs but he resented a "dressing down" from the executive. He went so far, in fact, as to engage in a dark plot with a fellow interne, likewise in ill-favor, for the discomfiture of Dr. Rowe. The next time they were called to "center" together one of them interrupted the doctor in his adjurations on his fellow-in-crime by turning upon his friend before he had time to answer the charge. "Now, I told you not to do that. You know you shouldn't have done it, and you deserve to be called up for it." The other defended himself with indignation, whereupon Dr. Rowe's new ally and upholder came back with hot shot. In a moment sparks were flying. The doctor amazed alike by the quarrel and by the unexpected defense of his own position, sat by in futile astonishment, and by the time he had composed the differences of his irate apprentices he had completely lost sight of the original object of the session.

"If we had been spanked more as boys," remarked the other culprit to Wood many years after, "we might have been quieter in our hospital days."

CITY APPROVES TAX UPON BOOTLEGGERS

WOULD REINSTATE THEM

Great Falls, Mont., Jan. 4 (A.P.).—When a policeman collects license money from a speakeasy or bootlegger and turns it over to the city treasury, he is not guilty of moral turpitude, the Great Falls Police Commission has ruled.

The commission in a report to the mayor last night said the conviction of six officers on charges of conspiracy to violate the Federal prohibition law did not involve any reflection on the moral character of the men and recommended they be reinstated.

Mayor A. J. Fousek has five days to accept, amend or annul the commission's findings. He made no comment tonight regarding what course he intended to pursue.

The officers were convicted in Federal court recently of collecting at regular intervals fines from bootleggers and speakeasies. The commission, sitting in the suspension hearing of the officers, among whom is the chief of police, Ray Gaunt, found they did not profit from the collections.

Royal Bones Found In Irish Mountain

London, Jan. 4 (A.P.).—The remains of a king and queen, believed by experts to have reigned from 1,800 to 2,000 years ago, have been found on Sheebeg, a mountain near Carrick-on-Shannon, Ireland, says the Sunday Times.

The skeletons, lying side by side, were discovered in a vault the entrance of which was barred by a solid block of dressed masonry weighing more than ten tons. Their heads were facing the former royal seat of Tara, where Irish kings supposedly were crowned in pagan days. Historians believed they are members of a dynasty whose origin has been lost in the mists of antiquity.

Further exploration is being carried out, since treasure and armor are believed concealed in another chamber in the interior of the mountain. The ruins are being guarded night and day by civic guards.

Ruhr Strike Riots Kill 2, Injure 15

Essen, Germany, Jan. 4 (A.P.).—Clashes over the week-end in the Ruhr strike district claimed two lives and sent fifteen miners and Communist agitators to hospital.

At Lintfort a mob of Communist strikers stormed a police station to demand the release of two arrested leaders. One worker was killed and twelve others were wounded in the resulting shooting. In Mengede, at about the same time, Communists clashed with workers who refused to join the "wild strike." One miner was shot dead and three others were wounded.

Strike agitation developed Friday after operators of the great Ruhr collieries notified 300,000 miners they would be discharged January 15 and must accept reduced wages if they worked after that date. Thereupon about 30,000 of the more radical called the "wild strike."

Hoover's Fish Stream Is Stocked With Trout

Special to The Washington Post.

Winchester, Va., Jan. 4.—President Hoover should have good luck fishing for trout in the Rapidan River in Madison County, Va., this spring, for the stream has been freshly stocked with choice specimens.

Agents of the United States Fish Commission have transferred large numbers of trout from the mountain hatcheries in West Virginia to the President's fishing preserve in Madison County, Va., and they are said to be of good size and "fighters."

BEWARE THE COUGH FROM COLDS THAT HANG ON

Coughs from colds may lead to serious trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a medical discovery with two-fold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and inhibits germ growth.

Of all known drugs creosote is recognized by high medical authorities as one of the greatest healing agencies for coughs from colds and bronchial irritations. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach, is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and checks the growth of the germs.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of coughs from colds, bronchitis and minor forms of bronchial irritations, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or flu. Money refunded if not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. (adv.)

APPARENTLY there was no surprise for him in the outcome of the popular request program balloting which Walter Damrosch announced Saturday night.

"The results were exactly as they would have been 25 years ago," Mr. Damrosch commented. "Popular taste in the classics does not change."

The selections chosen by the radio audience were: First, the introduction to the third act of "Lohengrin;" second, the first movement of Schubert's "Unfinished Symphony;" third, "The Beautiful Blue Danube," waltz, and fourth, the "Tannheuser" overture. These will be played in a program Saturday night, January 24.

A movement from Beethoven's Fifth Symphony, if we caught the announcement over the radio correctly, was the fifth choice, and Ravel's "Bolero," a modern composition, the sixth. These will be heard at a later date.

The new musical instrument based upon radio tube principles, invented by Maurice Martenot, French wireless operator and musician, is to have a network tryout tomorrow night (WMAL, 9:30 o'clock).

Declaring that he thought it was no longer fair to Amos 'n' Andy to give them such keen competition from Columbia, Frederic William Wile has changed his broadcast time from Monday at 7 p. m. to Tuesday at 7:15 p. m., the new hour being effective tomorrow.

TEMPORARILY being shown in Washington is the radio exhibit which King Alfonso was scheduled to spend a few minutes inspecting, but which occupied his attention for almost an hour. It consists of a model of the automobile which United States inspectors use to see if radio stations are toeing the mark with regard to power and not wobbling onto another station's wavelength. Also there is a miniature United States broadcasting station.

The exhibit, which for the next week will be in the lobby of the Fox Theater, was made up by W. D. Terrell, chief radio supervisor, especially for the exhibition at Seville, and it made such a hit that it was awarded the gold medal.

An idea of the detail of the automobile model may be gained when it is known that it cost $2,600. The real cars cost $5,600 apiece. There are now eight of them, the first one having been built on a shoestring by S. W. Edwards, radio supervisor at Detroit.

Each car is manned by a radio engineer and an assistant and has equipment which can tell to a gnat's hind heel exactly what a radio station is doing. It may be out in a cornfield, miles from the station, or it may be in the heart of a city, but the engineers aboard the car are able to tell exactly what is going on without a station having the slightest knowledge of the fact that it is being checked on at that particular time.

THE fourth of the series of Voters' Service National League of Women Voters' radio programs will be inaugurated tomorrow (WEAF network, 7 p. m.), with Senator Robert J. Bulkley, of Ohio, and Prof. Philip C. Jessup, of Columbia University, sounding the opening theme.

WOL believes it has found the answer to what the listener wants to hear on Sunday afternoons in the Jack Ralston Orchestra, which plays an hour of light classical music. The station management declares it has received more favorable comments on this Sunday program than any of the other features it is now presenting.

Judge Paul Lineberger, legal adviser to the National government of China, has for his topic tonight, "Good Cheer, China" (WRC, 8 o'clock).

MRS. ARTHUR WOODS will be the first speaker in a new series, "World News About Women," tomorrow (WRC, 3 p. m.).

A barber shop will furnish the setting for a new sketch tonight by Vernon Dalhart and Adelyn Hood (WMAL, 8 o'clock).

Gass—So La Yodel's death wasn't unexpected?

Jane Interprets the MODE

Chic and serviceable are these two street frocks by David. One has a cardigan, and a smart vest of the same material. The other shows spacious pockets, and the ever-smart pleated skirt.

Paris, Jan. 4.

WHEN the Sunday night dress first made its appearance, smart women adopted it whole-heartedly, and now they are adapting it to informal evening wear to greater and greater degree. Thus, the Sunday night frock which was formerly seen only at home on the night specified, is being seen at many informal and intimate gatherings where the afternoon dress isn't quite good enough, and the evening gown far too elaborate.

And why not? It is so correct, with its graceful sweep of skirt, interesting detail of line and luxurious trimmings. The sleeves have been derived from history and the furred trimming from the Renaissance, and cleverly and charmingly applied to these present Sunday night creations.

Crepe, velvet, metallic cloth and lace are the popular fabrics I saw forming most of the Sunday night frocks. Crepe retains its supremacy because it is less prone to wrinkle than the others; but with the care of transparent velvet being known more widely all the time, velvet will undoubtedly displace the crepe before long. And velvet, it seems to me, is the fabric to use for anything so gracious, so feminine as the Sunday night mode—and the one that best justifies the use of bandings of mink, sable and ermine that so many of these frocks use.

This turquoise fad, lovely and becoming though it is, isn't going to last so many months or days more! Watch out then for creamy coral, and mysterious jade!

Most of us would just love to have an Agnes hat—a real, honest-to-goodness Agnes hat, now wouldn't we? Even if we had to pay a very stiffish price for it. Because an Agnes hat always has a chic and becomingness that others somehow seem to lack. Wel-l-l-l, I think I'll play the Good Fairy act right now and tell you how you can have such a hat. Such a hat?—several of them, to match your favorite frocks, and for very little money and a wee bit of your time. And your stamped, self-addressed envelope which you'd better send right off to the Dare department of The Washington Post for this week's illustrated leaflet, telling just how easy it is to make a copy of my favorite Agnes hat.

One of my readers recently asked me if sports garments were becoming less popular, due to the strong influx of softly feminine fashions. There's the answer in my sketch today! Sportswear has a place all its own in the sun, and David is the couturier who thoroughly understands this mode in its most perfect form. He has made one with a cardigan and simple vest of self-material, and pleated the skirt in wide pleats that flare at the bottom. And the other has a more finely pleated skirt and roomy pockets set at the top of them. Both of these dresses have a V neckline which is so becoming to round faces.

Just to remind you again: Dare's weekly fashion letter appears in The Sunday Washington Post each week.

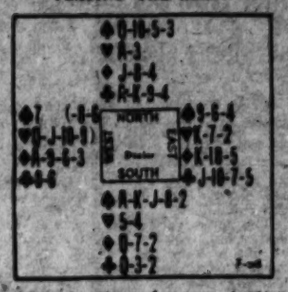
PLACING THE LEAD.



With the above hand in Auction Bridge the bidding would be: South one Spade, West two Hearts, North two Spades, followed by three passes.

At Contract it was: South one Spade, West two Hearts and North four Spades.

West led the Queen of Hearts and North won with the Ace. Three rounds of trumps then were led, followed by three rounds of Clubs, the third won in the dummy hand; but the adverse Clubs did not drop, so North's Nine was not good for a fourth Club trick, and South did not get a discard. The Declarer then tried to make up a Diamond trick, leading a small Diamond and hoping that East would play an Ace or King second hand. East declined to accommodate, however, and West won South's Queen with the Ace. After cashing one Heart, West returned the Diamond. East took two Diamond tricks and the Declarer was set.

THE CORRECT PLAY.

The early part of the hand was played perfectly, but after finding that the Clubs were not evenly divided North should have led the fourth Club, ruffing it in the South hand, and South then should have led a Heart. After that it would make no difference what the adversaries did. The Declarer, up to that point in the play, would have won four tricks with trumps, three Club tricks and one Heart, and would have one trump and three Diamonds left in each hand; he would need two more tricks for game. If the adverse hand that won the Heart trick led another Heart, the trumps could be made separately; if it led a Diamond, the result must be the making of a Diamond trick by Declarer—consequently game in either case.

WHEN REPOTTING PLANTS.

MANY amateurs have the impression that almost any soil will do for house plants. Now, while I must admit that most plants will grow in any soil, it is also true that to get the best results you must adapt the soil to the plant.

For example, should your soil be rather heavy, with more clay than loam in it, you can easily change it by adding sand. Thus you will have converted an almost impossible soil for some kinds of plants into a light, friable one that will furnish the necessary elements for the development of all varieties with strong roots. Any kind of sand available will do, but coarse, sharp sand is the best.

By experimenting with the soil you will be able to determine the quantity of sand needed. A good test is to mix some soil and sand together, then take it up in the hand and squeeze it firmly together. If, when the pressure is relaxed, the soil crumbles and falls apart or even shows a tendency to do so, it is safe to conclude that you have used enough sand.

This makes an ideal soil for most strong-rooted plants. Plants having finer roots, of the fibrous sort, will do better in a soil containing more loam than clay. Leafmold suits them even better than loam. It is impossible to give very definite instructions along this line, for some plants are a law unto themselves. Many kinds of plants, like the fuschsia, gloxinia, and some varieties of begonias, do best in a soil composed largely of leafmold. Leafmold has a large percentage of vegetable matter, which is essential to many of our soft-wooded plants.

Should you live where leafmold is unobtainable, let me tell you of a substitute that will prove almost, if not quite, as available. This substitute is to be found on the under side of old sod. Cut the sod with a sharp spade or a knife if you are only potting a plant or two, and turn it over. You will find that immediately below the grass is a soil full of very fine, hairlike roots. Shave this off and use it in place of leafmold.

Real leafmold comes from the woods. You can find it where leaves have drifted into hollows or about the roots of old trees and thoroughly decomposed. This soil is fine and mellow, almost black in color and very rich in fertilizing elements.

Always use sand when using any of the above-mentioned soils to keep the loam porous. Not so much sand, however, as when clay or garden loam is the basis of your soil. Leafmold is springy and does not pack and become hard, as does clay when it is watered.

Finely ground bonemeal is a welcome addition to most soils used for potting house plants and is a safe form of nourishment.

All readers' questions on growing and care of indoor and outdoor flowers and floral decorations for social functions will be answered by Miss Kift, directly in this column if addressed in care of The Washington Post, or directly to readers if a self-addressed, stamped envelope is supplied.

Wives of Tomorrow

FRANCES M'DONALD

THE MECHANICS OF FORGETTING.

DEAR FRANCES McDONALD: For over two years I have not missed your column one single night. It used to be a pastime to me. The last two months it has been different. For now I am no longer an onlooker, but one of the many with a heartache. It's a man, of course. A man who coolly says he "may" come back. But he wants to be sure. This after an engagement of nearly two years. He is not coming back. I know what. And yet I sit by the hour and think of him. Every word he said that last night. Every expression of his face. He looked sneaky and mean that night. He was ashamed. Also he was lying. And knew that I knew it. Yet I sit thinking and picturing a reunion. I am crazy, I guess, for surely I would not be fool enough to take him back. Or would I?

We met seven years ago. I was 18 he 24. It was love at first sight, but we had to wait first for one thing then for another. Then I moved away. Two years later we met again and became engaged at once. Twice the marriage has been postponed and now he is not sure. My intelligence—and I have a little, being a teacher—tells me to cut loose and do a good job of forgetting. But that is such desperate business—forgetting. But I am willing. How shall I begin?

SUNK.

You are a teacher. You know then that definite reactions can be brought about mechanically by the will. Get busy. You have often forgotten that you had a headache because the 'phone rang and some one you had not heard from in years spoke from the other end of the wire. Instantly your mind was busy with the business in hand and the other matter of the headache was forgotten, crowded out of the consciousness. It is in this manner that profssional forgetters go about forgetting. One of my friends has been divorced three times. Each time she goes to pieces, then suddenly throws the pieces together, buys a trunkful of new clothes and starts on a trip around the world. She never gets around the world because on shipboard or in Paris or some way-station she meets some perfectly "divine" man. And that's that. She forgets to go around the world. Has a thrilling time. And forgets. What she really does is to crowd one set of ideas out by letting another set in. It is simple and it works.

If you can take a trip do so. What you felt for this man was not love but a sentimental interest arising from the circumstances of your meeting which satisfied your sense of the esthetic. Love at first sight you call it. That explains your lasting interest. It seemed like story-book love. Well, find your self a good solid citizen who won't go in for moonlight but who will know what he wants when he sees it especially after he has seen it for seven years. You have been wasting time on a moron of sorts. When you have replaced him he will look in retrospect pretty limp and quite negligible. So start the simple mechanics of forgetting. And in six months write and tell me what the new man looks like. I could almost tell you what the first one looks like for they all resemble each other so closely, these parasitic lovers who do not quite know what it is all about. Remember six months.

What Today Means to You

"CAPRICORN"

IF JANUARY 5 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this day are from 2 p. m. to 4 p. m., and from 7:30 p. m. to 10:30 p. m. The adverse periods are from 8 a. m. to 10 a. m. and from 4:30 p. m. to 6 p. m.

January 5th holds out many possibilities, and the aspects favor especially all undertakings related to land or real estate. They apparently indicate success from some proposition shelved some time ago, and now unexpectedly resuscitated. A harmonious atmosphere is augured for the evening.

A child born on this January 5th will, as the result of freedom from ailments, have a happy disposition. It will be an enthusiast for games, but will not neglect its work to pay, promises to be penedcent and kind. You will have your share of sorrow, but the resiliency of your disposition, combined with a spirit of resignation to the inevitable, will never allow you to be snowed under. You will never take the final count, nor are you of the make-up to throw in the sponge. Your ideals are very high, and you live in the atmosphere which the best in you evolves. You keep your chin up and, although extremely practical, never allow your actions to be distorted by pettiness of thought or action.

If ambition were one of your assets, you could achieve much. As it is, however, you do not aim to climb any dazzling heights, but are content with a satisfied conscience, and the knowledge that you have done, possibly not your utmost, but your best material aggrandizement means nothing to you. High position does not attract you. If you attain any marked degree of popular approval, it will never be because you have sought it, but because it will have been thrust upon you.

Your disposition is an equable one, and criticism is generally disarmed by the "soft answer." On the other hand, you are not a human door mat and without pyrotechnics, you can stand up for your rights. In the home, you are a source of strength, and a boon companion and a faithful mate.

Hollywood Screen Life

By HUBBARD KEAVY.

Hollywood.—The movies, having just about exhausted the possibilities of stories dealing with earthly criminals, are turning to the occult as a new means of bringing thrills and horror to the screen.

JOHN BARRYMORE

The public has shown that it is receptive to film stories about the unusual, the mysterious and the "unknown." The soon to be released "Dracula," a novel experiment in movie entertainment, is expected to be the beginning of a celluloid "reign of terror."

"Dracula" is as fantastic as it is terrifying. Although a book and a play, it was believed that the story never would be put on the screen. Its central character, played by Bela Lugosi, is a vampire, a ghastly being that sucks the blood of its victims while they sleep.

"Svengali" Another.

Another picture to be made early this year, "Svengali," taken from "Trilby," is about the hypnotic influence a voice teacher exerts on one of his pupils, a young girl who can sing only when responding to the elderly man's mental suggestion. His sudden death, ending her career, is the climax.

The possibility of remaking one of John Barrymore's silent pictures, "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," also in the realm of fantasy, has been discussed. But Barrymore first will be seen as "Svengali."

Run Out of Thrills.

Speaking of thrills, aviation pictures have contributed their share of them for a sensation-loving nation. "Wings" started the ball rolling and other flying stories since, chiefly "Hell's Angels" and "The Dawn Patrol," have brought the war-aviation theme very near to a finish.

Trick maneuvers and even the most death-defying stunts which aviators have devised are not thought up on a moment's notice. They are the result of time and energy and, inevitably, cost many lives.

Another reason, and perhaps an important one, is the cost of stunt flying. "Hell's Angels" kept an average of 70 pilots on the pay roll for nearly three years. They were paid $100 a day when they flew and $25 when not in the air."

YOUR NAME — WHAT DOES IT MEAN?

By HARRY A. DEFERRARI, Ph.D.

The family name "Shields" has come down to use from several quite different sources. It is very frequently of Scandinavian origin, its ultimate source being the Old Norse "skiol," which means "the hut" or "the shed," and which indicates an original place of residence. Sometimes it signifies that the persons who first bore the name lived in a dwelling which displayed the sign of a shield as a means of identification. In such cases the name is of English origin. In very early times a common Anglo-Saxon personal name given to children was "Sceld" (also spelled "Scild" and "Scyld"). This old personal name, which may be translated "shield" or "protection," constitutes a third source of the modern family name. The old Celtic names "O Siadhail" and "O Siaghail" have generally resulted in the modern forms "O'Shiel," "Shiel" and "Shiels." However, many branches of this Irish family have adopted "Shields" in place of their original names. The early branches of this family became very famous because of the physicians and surgeons which they sent out to many parts of Ireland. "O Siadhail" and "O Siaghail" may be translated "the descendant of the slothful person." Of the English families named "Shields" many have received the name because of a former residence in North Shields, a town in Northumberland. A certain Willemus de Scheles is mentioned in an English document of the year 1379.

The family name "Willebrandt" (also spelled "Willebrant," "Wilbrand," &c.) is of German origin. It is a modern form of the old Germanic personal name "Willibrand," which may be translated "eager fire brand" or "eager sword."

Guiding Your Child

By MRS. AGNES LYNE.

It is the pride of our country that it presents to its youth such opportunities for success. The popular magazines are filled with stories of boys who rose from shining shoes and selling newspapers to the presidency of a large corporation.

The typical story about the girl is no less spectacular. Not only does she often rise from the position of a poor little stenographer to being the wife of a millionaire employer, frequently she begins as a humble stock girl to become a successful buyer who each year makes a glamorous journey to Paris.

Meteoric success in terms of money and position seems to be the national dream.

More and more, however, the chances of rising to such fabulous heights through single handed effort are becoming limited. Yearly business seems to become more and more organized so as to restrict somewhat the number of opportunities for rising from the ranks.

Nevertheless, the average American youth continues to regard the world as his oyster and leaves school filled with an anticipation which reality will most certainly not justify.

The humble jobs with which in ninety-nine cases out of a hundred he will have to be content for years and usually for life must be a bitter disappointment.

This difference between the reality and the dream is without a doubt a contributing factor in the much-talked-of maladjustment of youth.

The wise parent leads his child to accept a realistic view of the facts. A rational training along these lines would make him understand that although no one can hope for success without effort, effort alone does not necessarily bring success.

It is important to learn to use one's assets to the best possible advantage, but it is folly to expect that life will immediately and infallibly bring the highest possible reward.

Billie Burke's New Goal Is Stardom in Television

New York, Jan. 4 (A.P.).—With 30 years in the theater and motion pictures already in her record, Billie Burke is eagerly looking forward to the beginning of a new phase of her career in the theater of the future.

Mediums of entertainment are changing, she said today, and she is determined to keep pace. Having been a star on the stage and in silent pictures, she intends also to be a star in talking pictures, and, later in that theater that is to come—the theater that combines all mediums with radio and television.

Being the wife of Florenz Ziegfeld, "Follies" impresario, and mother of 14-year-old Patricia Burke Ziegfeld, has not been enough to utilize all the time of this red-haired commedienne, who has been an actress since she was 12 years old.

"I love being an actress," she said, "but I can't find enough plays I like well enough to keep me busy. I am going into the talkies, but I also find there the same handicap of scarcity of stories. I won't play old women roles, character parts.

"The theater is changing so much today; everything is changing. I intend to keep up with it all. People are living life at an increasingly faster pace, and they demand their entertainment the same way."

Miss Burke is now starred in Tom Novello's comedy, "The Truth Game," at Ethel Barrymore's theater. ... has Miss Barrymore's dressing room for her own use, the first actress, they say, to be accorded that privilege.

The regular blue decoration of the room has been set off by draperies of a sunset hue. Miss Burke's favorite color and of the same shade as her hair. A tiny gray and white kitten, of no pedigree at all, is her constant companion.

The possibility is that within a few years Miss Burke will be costarred with her daughter in the same play—perhaps a television drama.

"So far, Patricia has shown no inclination to be an actress," Miss Burke said. "However, she will go into the theater when she grows older. As she herself says, that's the only thing she knows. She does have marvelous executive ability."

Miss Burke's other plans for the future may include permanent residence in Southern California. Since her visit there last summer, while Ziegfeld was producing the picture version of "Whoopee," she has been undecided whether she prefers the Hollywood hills or New York.

"I haven't made up my mind yet," she said, "but life in New York is so hectic."

Uncle Sam May Aid World In "Seeing America First"

Considers Adoption of Tactics That Have Made Tourist Business Such a Winner for Other Countries; New Federal Division Seen.

By WILLIAM ULLMAN.

Helping both Americans and foreigners to see America is an activity in which Uncle Sam is seriously thinking of engaging.

The task of performing this feat of supersalesmanship would be given to a division established in the United States Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce under terms of a bill sponsored by Representative Leonidas C. Dyer, of Missouri. If it is successful in the national legislature—and there are influential backers of the proposal—the old slogan "See America First" is destined to become world-wide.

It is not the intention of its sponsor, nor of those who are supporting him, to put the Government into the tourist business, competing with legitimate units of what is said to be the fourth largest industry in the United States. The purpose is rather to cooperate with private agencies already set up and to aid them through expert and authoritative research to keep abreast of developments in touring grounds at home and beyond the seas.

The Governmental agency this legislation seeks to establish would assemble a broad variety of useful data for the tourist business as it exists. Such information as changes in fares and rates for hotel accommodations or transportation, establishment of new hotels, and the thousand and one things a tourist desires to see, would be gathered and disseminated on request. Fairs, expositions and other spectacles, scenic attractions, places of historic interest, would be catalogued for ready reference. This information would be available not only to business enterprises, but to the individual as well.

Travel within the United States has grown to tremendous proportions. It has resolved itself into a huge industry made possible by the annual vacationing of more than 35,000,00 users of motor cars alone. In its development is seen vast possibilities for economic benefit for business of all kinds. An undoubted factor in the development of the motor car and the good roads movement, touring has attained the huge proportion of being a $3,000,000,000 American industry.

The Dyer bill has the following title describing its purpose:

"A bill to promote travel to and in the United States and its possessions, thereby promoting American business; and to encourage foreign travel in the United States."

Cooperation with existing private agencies is specifically stated as the intent of such legislation rather than governmental usurpation of a function of private enterprise. The bill defines the scope of the proposed Federal Travel Bureau by authorizing the Secretary of Commerce "to establish a division to be known as a travel division in the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce of the Department of Commerce. Such division shall, under his direction, and in cooperation with existing transportation and travel agencies, study, encourage, promote, and develop the travel of foreigners and of citizens of the United States and its possessions."

Americans are inveterate tourists, but the thought behind the present movement is that they still do not know their own country sufficiently. That they should be enabled to travel with greater economy of time and money, and with a larger measure of comfort and satisfaction, is the motive which underlies the proposal to constitute a Federal department an advisor on touring.

The idea has been tried successfully in foreign countries, and in many of them the promotion of touring is not left to private effort alone, but is recognized as a subject for official attention. There are touring clubs, automobile associations, Alpine clubs, and similar groups cooperating in the exploitation of their homelands. The movement also is supported by chambers of commerce, railways, hotels and steamship lines.

From Spain to Japan and from Russia to Chile the tourist finds an official welcome. National tourist offices and information bureaus are prepared to expedite his travels and add to the pleasure of his visit. In addition, he receives maps and literature and even has at his command officially licensed guides, government-regulated hotels and a variety of other facilities that the appreciation of the tourist as an economic asset has developed.

"This legislation should be enacted into law because it will enable our Federal Government, through the Department of Commerce, to lend its weight and influence to encouraging our own people and those of other countries to see America. Our trade commissioners all over the world will then be officially also travel commissioners. With information furnished by the department touching the things to see in America, they will be of great help by fully advising foreigners who contemplate a trip to the United States."

He points out that other countries are doing this on a large scale. France, for example, is spending a million dollars a year to encourage people of other countries to come to Paris. And every year Americans who visit France leave there more than double the amount France appropriates for this purpose.

Though having a valuable international purpose, its sponsor envisions the plan as having tremendous benefit for the tourist in this country.

"We have in America things to attract our own people and foreigners as well," declares Mr. Dyer. "All we need is to show them and to have the facilities through governmental cooperation for giving them proper attention as they travel about. Famous Pikes Peak has more 'climbers' riding and walking up its slopes every year than any other high mountain in the world. Our national parks are unsurpassed in grandeur and beauty. Our mountains, glaciers, lakes and canyons have scenery unmatched.

"Our own people expended last year $4,000,000,000 for travel, $3,000,000,000 in this country and $1,000,000,000 in foreign countries. We don't want to keep our people away from foreign travel, but we do want Americans to see America and foreigners to do likewise. We are fully justified in urging every one to see America and enjoy a vacation while viewing its beauties and wonders of nature."

Already, it may be seen, a vast sum is spent by the tourist in the United States. How much larger it will be when governmental assistance is extended in developing its growth may well be imagined. Roadside stands alone, of which there are 125,000, do an annual business of $500,000,000.

Virtually every business and industry benefits from touring. The automobile industry owes no small portion of the 27,500,000 motor cars now in use to their availability for travel as a recreation. Gasoline sales, which totaled 15,000,000,000 gallons during 1930, have been augmented considerably by the tourist trade. Hotels, of which there are nearly 30,000, owe a large portion of their annual income of $5,000,000,000 to the tourist.

That every business reaps its own advantages is shown by the way the tourist's dollar is spent. Contrary to general belief, it does not all go to hotels or to transportation. The latter receives but 7 to 10 per cent. Garages and accessory establishments get 11½ per cent. Confectionery and incidentals account for 6 per cent, while theaters and other amusements receive 8½ per cent of the total.

Scientific Laboratory On 10,000-Foot Peak

Basel, Switzerland, Jan 4 (A.P.).—A building has been erected atop the 10,500-foot Jungfrau-Joch mountain to house the Alpine Institute of Scientific Research.

The building, made possible by international cooperation, will be opened in the spring.

The organizations interested in the project include the Rockefeller Foundation in the United States, the Kaiser Wilhelm Gesellschaft, the Royal Society of England, the Akademie der Wissenschaft of Vienna, the University of Paris, the Swiss Alpine Club.

The Duke of Fife died the following year and his death was generally attributed to after effects of the exposure he underwent on this occasion.

Since her husband's death the Princess Royal shrank more than ever from the fierce light that beats upon the royal family and her quiet and peaceful passing today seems in some sort a fitting end to this gentle woman's whole career. The sad news was telephoned immediately to the king at Sandringham. The lord chamberlain's office announced tonight there will be four weeks full court mourning, commencing today, and two weeks half mourning.

Neuritis!
There is no pain like Neuritis. There is nothing quite so torturing—so utterly unbearable as Neuritis. It robs life of all joy—and makes people desperate. But Neuritis is not hopeless—it responds to proper treatment. A well-known physician has written us, "Have been drinking Mountain Valley Water for six weeks for Neuritis and am feeling better than I have for two years." Mountain Valley Mineral Water from Hot Springs, Arkansas, brings relief in Neuritis because it gets at the root of the trouble—it tends to neutralize the acids which are irritating the nerves and retards the further accumulation of these acids by aiding healthy, normal elimination through the kidneys. Renew your hope—learn how Nature can can help you. Phone for our booklet today. Met. 1062.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. W. A. EVANS

SUGAR FOR HUMANS.

ORDINARY starch is the only starchy food that human beings convert into sugar and use as such, to either their advantage or disadvantage. Other starches, or near starches, such as the cellulose phytin and pentosans of bran, of soya beans, or Jerusalem artichokes are in another class. Whether they are helpful or harmful is to be decided on other grounds. These conclusions have to do with such questions as: Which is preferable, white bread or brown, wheat or rye? Shall bran be eaten, and if so when can diabetics eat Jerusalem artichokes or soya bean bread?

They are the conclusions of Drs. McCance and Lawrence, issued as one of the studies authorized by the British research council. Cellulose and the other near starches are converted into fatty materials to a limited extent by the human digestive apparatus, and, as such, fatty material can go a certain distance in nourishing the human body, but the effect differs from that of starch foods. If a man eats wheat bran he gets some starch, for in milling some of that sticks to the bran. But if he uses a bran from which all starch has been removed by washing he gets no starch. His digestive apparatus converts some of the near starches into fatty materials and these are absorbed and used.

A diabetic or an obese person can use bran in limited quantities without making his trouble worse. The laxative action of bran is due partly to its physical qualities but principally to chemical substances it contains. Agar is in somewhat the same class as bran. Some of it is converted into fatty bodies and used as food. As in the case of bran, its laxative action is partly chemical and partly physical.

The authors are not very definite in their opinion as to the superiority of brown over white bread. One of their conclusions makes rye bread a better food than wheat bread.

FREQUENT NOSEBLEED.

J. W. writes:

1. Should a slight nosebleed, occurring once and sometimes twice a day, and lasting two to three minutes, be taken seriously? (This has been happening to me for the last three or four months. Also blood comes from only one nostril.) Is this a symptom of some form of nose trouble?

2. Which is considered the more healthful, maintaining an even temperature day and night of 68 to 70 degrees or having it about 80 degrees during the day and about 40 degrees during the night for sleeping?

REPLY.

1. I think an examination of your nostril would show an exposed blood vessel or some other local condition that could be remedied. Possibly your blood pressure should be taken.

2. The first is better, but absolute uniformity of temperature is not the optimum for health.

JOE TURNESA WINS MIAMI OPEN TITLE BY 1 STROKE

Westbrook Pegler Says

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—Mr. Jack Curley, the promoter of wrestling matches, who is arranging to take William T. Tilden 2d around the country on an All-Comers' Tour, takes advantage of a minor error of mine to strut his refinement and tell the story of his life.

"Dear Sir, you big bum," Mr. Curley writes, "in a recent article you described my butler as having cauliflower ears. That is a contemptible falsehood. My butler has not got any cauliflower ears. My butler is one of the most refined butlers on Long Island and it would not surprise me any if he should walk in on you and bust you one, as he is no mugg and will not take anything off muggs of your type.

"You also stated that I started my professional career as a waiter in a beer cellar in St. Louis. That is, I think that is what you are trying to say. You start off a sentence all right, but you run on and on like a packdriver's dream and it is very hard to make out what you are trying to say. Did you ever try setting pins in a bowling alley? There must be something you can do.

PIN-BOY JOB URGED FOR PEGLER

"If that is what you mean, however, you are not only a contemptible falsifier, my dear sir, and if you want to know what else you are, come and see me. Or see my butler.

"The fact is that I was born in San Francisco in 1876. In 1898 everybody was talking about going to Chicago for the World's Fair, so I got on a train and started for Chicago, myself. A party had told me that if you bought a short-ride ticket and pretended to be asleep whenever the conductor came around, you could ride all the way to New York. I didn't see how the railroads could make any money if the news of this got around generally, but that was not my worry and I bought a ticket to Sacramento.

"At Sacramento the conductor threw me off and I got a job in a grocery store which had an artesian beer well in the back room. People would bring their pitchers into the store and you would set the pitchers on the scales, turn on the pump and sell beer by weight. Well, for six weeks * * *

Here there will be an intermission denoting a lapse of 8,000 words, resuming at the point where Mr. Curley arrived in St. Louis after the Chicago affair.

"Since leaving Sacramento I had ridden many hundreds of miles higher than the uppers and lower than the lowers, but never in a berth. Arriving in St. Louis, I crawled out from under and started walking into stores to look for employment. But I was very bashful, and after I would get inside a store I would generally ask if Mrs. Brown lived there and walk out. But finally I came to place named Tony Faust's, a big restaurant and catering place, where there was a sign reading 'Man wanted.'

"I had a good meal and they put me to work running a dish-washing machine. This machine was very complicated and I forgot to latch the door before turning on the steam. So when I turned on the steam the door popped open and the air was full of plates, tea cups and gravy boats, and I was unemployed again. But Mr. Faust said I could have a job hoisting barrels of oysters into his delivery wagons and in this work I met a boy named Gus Fredericks, who belonged to an athletic club and was learning to fight. I became his manager and thus entered the sporting profession, resigning my job hoisting oyster barrels into the wagons. However, I thought Fredericks ought to keep his job, so it was just good training for him and, moreover, boxers have a tendency to grow lazy if they are not employed.

QUITS POST AS BARREL HOISTER

"One night he fought a party 54 rounds for $200 a side and the police intruded on us, halting the contest.

"We were fined just $100 apiece, which our stake just covered, and the photographs of the two boys still hang in the police headquarters in St. Louis as evidence of the worst punishment two fighters ever took in the ring.

"In his next fight he quit, so I left St. Louis and now I must tell you about the fight between Fitzsimmons and Peter Maher on the Mexican palisades opposite Langtry, Tex. The fight was to have taken place in Dallas, then in El Paso and then in the bull ring at Juarez. But the United States Minister in Mexico City got President Diaz to issue a decree forbidding the bout on Mexican soil,

BALTIMORE, Md., Jan. 4.—Two teams from Washington battled today on the indoor courts at the Fifth Regiment Armory in the fourth round of the Winter Indoor Tennis League, the match going to the Washington All-Stars, who defeated the Dumbarton netmen by the score, 7 matches to 2. The losers' two matches were gained by defaults.

The All-Stars, defending champions of the league, moved into second place as a result of the victory, stepping past the Racquet Club of Baltimore. Five games separate the All-Stars from the league-leading Clifton Park netmen.

Considine Finally Wins A Match.

The winners wasted little time today in piling up a margin. Dooly Mitchell, Maryland indoor champ, toyed with Owen Howenstein for two 6—2, 6—2 sets, while Bob Considine played more presentably than so far this year to defeat Joe Rutley, 6—4, 6—1.

Perhaps the feature match of the day was the one in which Frank Shore, recently crowned national junior indoor doubles champion, and Bob Considine defeated Freddy Doyle and Joe Rutley after the loss of the first set.

It was a volleying battle from start to finish, with Shore displaying some of the best on-the-fly stroking of the indoor season. Doyle's forehand drive nearly turned the tide in his team's favor, but faltered after the eventual losers had led 5—4 and deuce in the second set, after winning the first.

SINGLES.

Mitchell defeated Howenstein, 6—2, 6—2; Considine defeated Rutley, 6—4, 6—1; Shore defeated Doyle, 7—5, 6—4; Buchanan defeated Walker, 7—5, 7—5; Yeomans defeated Dawson, 6—4, 6—4; Furinton defeated Markey by default.

DOUBLES.

Mitchell and Buchanan defeated Howenstein and Furinton, 6—1, 6—2; Considine and Shore defeated Rutley and Doyle, 6—4, 7—5, 6—2; Walker and Dawson defeated Markey and partner by default.

Company F Rallies To Defeat Mercury

A sensational second-half rally enabled Company F basketers to defeat the Mercurys yesterday afternoon at the Hyattsville Armory by a 38-to-21 score. The Guardsmen were behind at the intermission, 13 to 11, but soon forged to the front in the next stnaza.

High-scoring honors for the game were captured by J. Shanklin, of the winners, who caged six double-deckers and three fouls, for 15 points. Troy, a teammate, registered 13 points. Self and Cunningham led the Mercurys.

Potomac Boat Club Wins Over Army Five

Scoring thirteen points in a fourth-quarter rally to two for their opponents, Potomac Boat Club cagers defeated the Company M five of Fort Washington yesterday afternoon in the Soldiers' gym by a 34-to-21 count. Previous to this last-minute rally the District quintet was leading by only two points.

Kern and Stevens Win Amateur-Pro Event

Santa Monica, Calif., Jan. 4 (A.P.).—Tom Stevens, Culver City, Calif., professional, assisted by one of his club's members, 19-year-old Henry Kern, amateur, today won Santa Monica's first annual $1,500 amateur-pro golf tournament with the best ball card of 30—33—63, 8 under par. Stevens' first prize money was $300.

Three combinations tied for second place. The teams were: George Shaw, Los Angeles amateur, and Horton Smith, New York professional, 32—33—65; Bill Jelliffe, Los Angeles amateur, and Tony Manero, New York professional, 35—30—65; George Bronough, amateur, and Vic Owens, professional, both of San Pedro, Calif., 32—33—65.

Harris Has New Plan For Training Pitchers

Pitchers of the Detroit Tigers will not be permitted to touch a ball or bat during their first ten days in training camp under a new plan announced by Manager Bucky Harris, who believes the hurlers should get their legs in shape before attempting to limber their arms.

Harris also announced that First Baseman Dale Alexander had been ordered to report with the pitchers, February 15, because of the fact that he requires more time for conditioning than the average player.

Five Killed in Riots After Football Game In South America

Lima, Peru, Jan. 4 (A.P.).—Five persons were killed today in a clash which marked the end of an international football match between a team from Uruguay and one from the Peruvian department of Arequipa.

Peruvian troops, occupying the cheaper stands in the stadium, started booing and a soldier attempted to cross the field. Five policemen stopped him and used their swords to curb his belligerency.

As the other soldiers, most of whom were from Arequipa, saw their comrade in danger they charged out on the field at the police and were met with revolver shots. The spectators then joined in, throwing stones. More shots came from the police firearms and great confusion ensued.

Then the fighting was adjourned to various streets.

Another battle occurred near the stadium. A crowd stoned a street car in which four policemen had taken refuge and two civilians were injured.

Another throng packed the area in front of the government palace to protest against the police. Some carried sticks, from which flew pieces of blood-soaked clothing that had belonged to those killed in the disorders.

Some of the victims were soldiers, for at an emergency aid station the correspondent saw one army man who had been killed and another who was seriously injured.

BASS TO RISK JR. LIGHT CROWN

NEW YORK, Jan. 4 (A.P.).—The American debut of Len Harvey, British middleweight champion, and a junior lightweight championship battle share interest in this week's national boxing schedule.

Harvey, regarded as one of the most effective of England's boxers, meets Vince Dundee, of Baltimore, in the feature twelve-round bout on Madison Square Garden's card Friday night. Harvey has compiled an imposing record in ten years of fighting abroad. His handlers say he has been beaten only once in 360 engagements.

Dundee Should Extend Englishman.

Other bouts on the national schedule include:

WEDNESDAY—At Grand Rapids, Mich., Harry Dublinsky, Chicago, vs. Herman Perlick, Kalamazoo, Mich., lightweights, 10 rounds; at Oakland, Calif., Leon Chevalier, San Francisco, Negro, vs. Hans Birkie, Oakland, heavyweights, 10 rounds.

THURSDAY—At Peoria, Ill., K. O. Christner, Akron, Ohio, vs. Bud Doran, Chicago, heavyweights, 10 rounds.

3,000 Watch D. C. Soccer Club Win

Beyerlin's Goal Wins Semifinal of Play for Post Cup.

By RICHARD S. TENNYSON.

WASHINGTON received its greatest soccer thrill yesterday afternoon when, in the last minute of a spectacular game, Cary Beyerlin received a neat center from the toe of Johnny Malloch and converted it into a goal that spelled victory for the Washington-Concord Eleven over eleven gentlemen from Virginia composing the Newport News Soccer Team. Beyerlin's goal put the locals in the finals of the Washington and Southeastern District Soccer Association Cup tie tournament, which is being played for possession of The Washington Post trophy. The final score was 3 to 2.

It is doubtful if the most blase of the 3,000 spectators who lined the Monument Field left without feeling the aftermath of the tremors caused by the reckless, dashing, but, nevertheless, well-played game of the opposing teams. Dogged determination gave the District soccerists victory over a team that showed superior ability in every department of play.

"Will to Win" Gives Victory To Locals.

To any one who did not witness the contest, the statement that a better team in all particulars was defeated by the mere will to win of the victors, will sound strange, but it is true. Coach and Trainer Ted Dawson brought to Washington from Newport News a fast, well conditioned, scientific soccer club, but the margin of victory belonged to the District team for the reason that it possessed just a little bit more of the winning spirit.

It is doubtful if a more bitterly fought game of any description has ever been played on a local field, but the proof that "eleven gentlemen from Virginia" lost may be found in the statement of canny old Fred Dawson after the game that his boys had enjoyed the contest more than any in their career and they considered Leo Leckey one of the finest referees under whom they had ever played.

At the start of the contest, play was confined to midfield as the worthy Alex Mitchell, of Newport News, kept the Washington Club at a safe distance from his goal and the fierce attack of the visitors prevented the locals from approaching the Virginia uprights. Ten minutes had elapsed before the W. C. could penetrate the Newport News defense and then the agile work of Wallace, at goal for the losers, staved off possible scores. John Pollock was also a factor in the strong stand of the Southerners.

Visitors First to Break The Ice.

Twenty minutes after the game started the District eleven was pressing the Old Dominion kickers hard and forced them to concede several corners but failed to register. Just at this time, N. Groves broke away from a scramble in front of his goal, dribbled nearly field length, and passed to J. Groves, who headed the sphere into the net for the first marker.

Not more than two minutes after Newport News' success, the desperate Washington-Concords organized and carried a concentrated attack to the visiting uprights. As a result, a corner was gained and Carl Beyerlin made a perfect shot to the mouth of the Virginia goal and the doughty little Emil Koennel trapped the sphere and blasted it under the cross bar for the equalizing goal.

Still aglow, the Washington-Concords charged back on the offensive after the kickoff and just three minutes after Emil's success Johnny Malloch, after staging a lone duel in the Newport News goal box with its entire back field, booted the locals into the lead.

The smooth-working machinery of the visitors then carried the game to the leaders' goal area. Whiteford and the Groves brothers, Nick and John, led the attack. This clever trio of passers had Jess Burton, Tom Blanche and Heise in hot water for about five minutes and finally Blanche, while prostrate, in desperation stopped one of Whiteford's shots with his hand. Janes tied the score from the resulting penalty.

Faulds' Booting Lets Team Rest.

For the remainder of the half, the game was nip and tuck. The cagy George Faulds, realizing that his team was about spent for the time being, kept the game away from his uprights with long boots far past midfield whenever his goal was threatened. Incidentally, the work of Faulds was one of the deciding factors in the final result.

A more spirited or thrilling 45 minutes of soccer has not been witnessed on a local field than took place in the second half of the game. Players crashed recklessly, tempers were on frayed edges, goalies were tried repeatedly, but bearing out the sentiment of the Newport News players, Referee Leckey handled a difficult situation in a most exceptional manner, avoiding possible combats and in general keeping the game in hand.

Lechie Uses Judgment in Officiating.

Late in the game, Whiteford, of Newport News, grabbed Louie Koennel's arm and, as hostilities loomed, Referee Leckey hustled both from the field. Play moved from one end of the field to the other in lightning-like manner. Frequently in the heat

THE given name of Mohammed is extremely popular among the followers of that Great Prophet and the Mohammedans form no small part of the earth's population. There are a lot of Johns and Williams in the world, but not so many of either as there are Mohammeds. For instance, as stated by Lowell Thomas, the famous author and traveler, nearly every family in Arabia has at least one child named Mohammed.

John Smith, an English farmer, was convicted on a charge of housebreaking and was taken to the town of Tyburn for execution. He was hanged before a large group of people, but after swinging for 15 minutes, a reprieve arrived, and Smith was cut down. Strange as it seems, Smith was restored to consciousness—and lived!

Endowment Fund to Support Athletics Started by Swarthmore College in 1928

By ALAN GOULD
(Associated Press Sports Writer).

NEW YORK, Jan. 4 (A.P.).—One of the most widely discussed of recent pronouncements on college athletics is the proposal of Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler, of Columbia University, of "endowment" of sports programs by the alumni to do away with the overemphasis of football gate receipts.

An attitude of "interesting but impractical" was reflected generally in reaction to Dr. Butler's suggestions among college executives, but the voice of Dr. Frank Aydelotte, president of Swarthmore College, was raised today in emphatic approval as well as practical effect.

In response to the Associted Press survey, Dr. Aydelotte revealed that Swarthmore, as far back as 1928, adopted a definite policy of supporting its athletics with a $200,000 endowment fund, designed to eliminate dependence on gate receipts or games played primarily for the financial return.

Condemns Practice Of Colleges.

Making public his annual report, in which he condemns the practice of the smaller college playing the big fellow solely for the financial return involved, Dr. Aydelotte wrote to the Associated Press:

"I feel very strongly that most of the evils in college athletics come from the growing habit of playing games for the benefit of spectators. We began in 1928 an effort to raise an athletic endowment at Swarthmore of $200,000 which would make our athletic program practically independent of gate receipts and allow us to arrange our schedules as we saw fit. We have not as yet progressed very far with this because we have been preoccupied with the raising of $4,000,000 for the endowment of academic work. I hope, however, that as soon as times are better we shall be able to complete the athletic endowment fund."

Set-Up Contests Decried.

"There is a growing feeling of dissatisfaction among undergraduates and alumni with our traditional policy of playing one or two football games against teams from large universities for the sake of the financial returns. Games of this type with teams outside our own class can not be justified on any except financial grounds. They are not fun either for players or spectators. Furthermore, the newspaper publicity and the attitude of the spectators distort values and endanger true sportsmanship.

"A great many of the alumni and undergraduates whose judgment is soundst and whose appreciation of athletic sports is keenest are opposed to the continuation of such games and the athletic committee is at the present time seriously considering a change in policy. In my opinion, they would be wise to make our football schedule entirely with teams in our own class. The same consideration does not apply to other sports for the reason that it is only football which attracts large crowds.

Need $200,000 Fund.

"If the change is made and if we confine our football schedule to teams from smaller colleges with which we have a real rivalry, the problem of finding the modest sum which is needed to support our athletics will become acute. This need can be met satisfactorily only by the raising of an athletic endowment fund of about $200,000."

Last season Swarthmore's major team opponents were Pennsylvania and Army, played on successive Saturdays and resulting in setbacks by scores of 63-0 and 39-0, respectively.

Four-Handicap Golfer to Make Movie "Actor" of Bobby Jones

George E. Marshall has been selected as director of the twelve one-reel pictures of educational golfing subjects which the retired champion of champions is to make for Warner Brothers.

Marshall, who will try to show Bobby how to make as big a hit on the screen as he did on his rise to dizzy heights in golfdom, has been a movie director for seventeen years, much of the time with Fox Films. He directed Ruth Roland and Tom Mix in their early days.

He is a four handicap man at Lakeside and in 1926 was club champion. He is a director of the Southern California Golf Association.

Marshall plans to leave Hollywood for Atlanta on January 12 to confer with Jones on the preparation of scripts. In March both will go to the Lakeside Club, where the pictures will be produced.

At Lakeside, of which Jones has been made a member, he will find himself in the midst of the movie world, for among the stars who play there are Douglas Fairbanks, Charlie Rogers, John Barrymore and Wallace Beery. The club is on the shore of Lake Toluca, whose water forms some of the hazards.

Porte Flamme Winner In French Stake Race

Nice, France, Jan. 4 (A.P.).—Porte Flamme romped away from a field of six rivals today to win the Grand Prix de Monaco, first big fixture of the winter racing season on the French Riviera. Porte Flamme, a son of Ksar, greatest stake winner in the history of the French turf, and owned by Arthur Manby, of England, won by five lengths from Dictateur, with Harry La Montagne's Effulgent third. Porte Flamme paid 11 to 1 in the betting.

The Grand Prix de Monaco is run over a steeplechase course of 2¼ miles and today's renewal was worth $4,000.

Three in Tie For Second Honors

Winner Gains $400 in First Test of Florida Season.

MIAMI, Fla., Jan. 4 (A.P.).—In a stirring finish at sunset, Joe Turnesa, Elmsford (N. Y.) professional, today won the Miami open golf championship, with a score of 294 for the 72 holes.

Starting the final 36 holes 1 stroke behind Eddie Williams, Cleveland pro, Turnesa played a deliberate, steady game to beat down the bids of Johnny Farrell, Mamaroneck, N. Y.; Henri Ciuci, Stratford, Conn., and Jock Hutchison, all of whom came from behind to threaten.

Turnesa, Williams, Farrell Tied at 63rd.

After 63 holes, Turnesa was tied with Williams and Farrell for the leadership with 256 and Ciuci was just a stroke back. Jock Hutchison, Chicago, also had a chance with a 261.

Two threesomes ahead of Williams and Farrell, Turnesa brought his 73—73—74—74—294 to the clubhouse just as the sun set. Williams, Farrell and Ciuci playing together in the final threesome, were overtaken by darkness on the seventeenth green. The moon came up and it was virtually impossible to see the eighteenth hole flag in the dusk.

The word came back that Turnesa had gone in with a 294. Farrell needed a par 4 to tie the championship and Williams and Ciuci needed birdies. It was so dark they had to put a white handerchief on the cup to guide the putting eye. Farrell misjudged the distances, overrunning the cup on his putt, and took a 5. Ciuci and Williams took dazzling par fours, but the title was already in Turnesa's bag.

Blue Ridge League Would Cut Salaries

Martinsburg, W. Va., Jan. 4.—When the annual meeting of the Blue Ridge League, Class D baseball's pioneer member, is held at Hagerstown on Thursday of this week, an attempt to reduce the salary limit from $2,800 per month, to $2,000 or possibly $1,800, is likely to be made. It was stated here today by Lewis H. Thompson, the league's vice president. The salary of the manager is not included in any of these limits.

Vice President Thompson said he was positive that if the league decided whole-heartedly to reduce operating expenses and could secure some aid for clubs not already owned by the majors, there would be no doubt about a six-club circuit being arranged for 1931.

Fort Myer Tossers Defeat Shipleys, 27-21

Trailing by four points at the intermission, the Fort Myer 130-pound cagers were forced to come from behind in the second half to beat the Shipley Midgets, 27 to 21, yesterday afternoon in the Soldiers' gym. Wolverton, with eight points, Schilling and Steele took leading parts in the rout of the Shipleys, while D. Hollingsworth and Headley led the losers.

Managers of teams desiring contests with the Fort Myers are asked to call Clarendon 1334-J-2.

Dor-A Five Bows To Brentwood Hawks

Although outplayed in the second half by a slight margin, Brentwood Hawk cagers were able, nevertheless, to score their first Prince Georges County League victory of the current season yesterday afternoon at the expense of the Dor-A Team, 19 to 15, and through a 9-point lead piled up during the first half. The battle was played on the Hyattsville Armory floor.

Fisher, of the Hawks, with four field goals and two fouls, led both teams in scoring.

BARNARD, HERE, PREDICTS EARLY PEACE ON DRAFT

League Head En Route to Florida

Marberry's Control Brilliant in Last Campaign.

By FRANK H. YOUNG.

ACCORDING to E. S. Barnard, American League head, who passed through Washington yesterday, within a very short time, possibly not more than two weeks, the so-called draft war will be over. As Mr. Barnard usually keeps his ears mighty close to the ground and knows what is going on in baseball, his opinion must be given considerable weight.

As things now stand, of the four minor leagues who refused to accept unlimited draft and were told to "pump or let go of the handle," the American Association clubs already have gotten together and agreed to accept the terms offered by the majors, while Mr. Barnard declares that the other three—the International, Western and Three-Eye—have decided among themselves to follow suit ere long.

Refusal to accept unmodified draft by these four clubs was a case of "making a mountain out of a mole hill," for, after all, only one player may be claimed from each team by the majors and even then not until after the minor clubs have had the opportunity of selling their best men. That the draft is not "hard to take" is indicated by the action of some of the lower grade leagues, who objected when the majors considered eliminating them from the draft rule.

Mr. Barnard's visit was not a business one, he declared, as he merely stopped off here to visit President Griffith, of the Nationals, while en route to St. Petersburg, where he has moved American League headquarters for the winter.

No Dividend This Year Likely.

Although the Washington Club made a little money during the 1930 season, the chances are that the stockholders will not be voted a dividend at tomorrow's annual meeting, which has been called for noon at Griffith Stadium.

What with the purchasing of players, the club's financial interest in the Chattanooga Southern Association club and the necessity of keeping a little surplus on hand for the coming season, indications are that those holding stock in the club will get nothing more substantial at tomorrow's session than wishes for a Happy New Year.

Zachary, Bluege, Altrock Golf.

"Ole Tom" Zachary, the Tarheel southpaw pitcher, who made many friends during his long career as a Washington pitcher and who now performs for the Boston Braves, is visiting Ossie Bluege here. He, Bluege and Coach Uncle Nick Altrock played a round of golf over the Rock Creek Park course Saturday.

Bluege, by the way, looks to be in the very pink of condition and, like all ball players, says he can hardly wait until the diamond season opens. He has never felt so much as a twinge in the knee, on which he was operated in the fall of 1929, he declares, this despite the fact that he played practically every game last season. The Nat third-sacker predicts another good year for himself.

Marberry Master Of Control.

Fred Marberry's good control last season must have been quite a relief to the opposing batsman for when Fred hits 'em they usually stay hit. In the 185 innings he toiled last season he not only did not hit a batter, but was not charged with a single wild pitch. He was the only American League hurler performing in more than 100 innings in 1930 who had perfect marks in these two respects.

Wes Ferrell, of the Indians; Vic Sorrell, of the Tigers; Milton Gaston, of the Red Sox, and Herb Pennock, of the Yankees, did not hit a batter, while Ad Liska, of the Nats, was one of seven who was not charged with a wild pitch. Although Gaston hit none he had eleven wild heaves charged against him.

Headquarters Five Lands 11th Straight

Army Headquarters passers yesterday won their eleventh straight game when they trounced the Tremonts, 41 to 31. The latter led, 18-15 at half-time, but could not withstand a last-half rush by the Soldiers.

The Timid Soul —By H. T. Webster

Boots and Saddles

(Reg. U. S. Patent Office)

—Fair Grounds Selections—

By J. B. SNODGRASS.

THE Pines, at 6 furlongs, for older horses, is the headliner today at the Fair Grounds. GOLDEN PRINCE is well placed and seems the class of his company. His second to Peggs Pride alone would justify his selection to win this dash and he has been improving rapidly and has worked well.

PARADISE LOST, which was second to Martis Wednesday, should be the contender unless TITUS is in trim, for this is his first race since leaving Maryland. He probably needs a race at this track before being an attractive investment, but when the money is down TITUS will be a hard horse to beat. CHIMNEY SWEEP may figure in this race, which has the smallest field on the card, eight horses having been entered. GOLDEN PRINCE should win all the way if the track remains fast. He was scratched from the feature Saturday.

FIRST RACE—A race for 2-year-olds at 3 furlongs opens the program, of which post time will be 3 p. m. Eastern standard time. Several of the baby racers have had an outing in the first three days of the meeting. Among these is WATAUGA, which was favorite Friday, but got away in a tangle and finished third to Dolly's Baby. She should win today. MAGNA MATER also had a rough trip in her start in the same race, but recovered and finished second. CANDY BOX, said to be a good one, which was scratched on Thursday, should figure in this race, as will CLOIRADE, second to Proteus in the first race for the season's 2-year-olds.

SECOND RACE—ORFORD is selected to win the second race, which is a mile and sixteenth. He beat a good field of platers on December 16, Chaff running second, and was favorite over the dozen starters that day. There is nothing in this race that can endanger him unless it should be LA DENTELLE, which is last on the eligible list and is therefore a doubtful starter. LA DENTELLE won a good race, but on a muddy track. POISON IVY should get third money. He was second to take off in his last start, but won his previous start from Eye White.

THIRD RACE—The third race is for 3-year-olds at a mile. WEST VIRGINIA is best, on his entire record, but his last race was bad. Nancy Jane winning at $90. KENTUCKY BILL is a dangerous contender. He was a beaten favorite in his last start, but in his previous race had beaten Fudge by a half-length. PETABIT is next best and always has a chance among the better class of platers. PETABIT was third to Principio last week. Several of the others in this race are worth consideration, and the result is very uncertain.

FOURTH RACE—GREENWALD is selected to win the fourth race for 3-year-olds on the ground that he is believed to be a sleeper which is about ready to wake up and show his true form to win at long odds. He has much less danger in this field than in his recent races. ENGLEWOOD, a very fast colt, may be the favorite, and will give a good account of himself, but he is tabbed for place. EYE WHITE seems to be a quitter. This distance is a mile and probably will be too long. EYE WHITE was second to Thistle Duke Friday. ENGLEWOOD ran third to Nervator a week ago, but won his previous race.

SIXTH RACE—RAHWAY looks best in the sixth race at a mile and a sixteenth. He was third to Elizabeth Sullivan last week, but in his previous start won. ORMONBIRD is very dangerous. He was beaten a length and a half by Come On in his last race, and that makes him have a big chance for this purse. PLAY BALL has a chance to figure in the money on some races and is rated third.

SEVENTH RACE—MARETTE has improved faster than most any of the winter races and should win the seventh race. MISS MARYLAND should be close to the pace. Next best may be CHAFF. MARETTE'S last race was excellent, running Cash Play to a nose finish. That race will win this one. MISS MARYLAND finished second to Grey Gull in her recent start.

EAGLES BEAT MISSOURI FIVE, 30-26

Skinkers Pull Away in Second Half of Fast Battle.

COMING from behind in the second half, Skinker Brothers Eagles scored their second straight triumph over a road club by nosing out the Olson Terrible Swede five, of Hamansville, Mo., yesterday afternoon on the Silver Spring Armory court, by a 30-to-26 count. More than 500 fans watched the visitors, claimants to the 1930 professional championship, battle the Skinkers to a standstill in the first half and through much of the second.

After assuming a 7-to-1 lead at the start of the contest, the Eagles weakened slightly to allow the Missourians to knot the count and then to hold a 15-to-13 advantage at the intermission. Sweeney's field goal at the start of the second half tied the score, and Bennie's follow-up shot, a moment later, sent the District quintet into the lead, which they held to the end.

Westerners Make Futile Rally.

With the Eagles ahead, 30 to 19, and only a few minutes to go, the Westerners staged a rally which netted them seven points before the final whistle blew.

Capt. Olsen, of the Swedes, featured the game with a brilliant one-handed flip from midcourt which swished through the iron hoops without touching the rim. Olsen also carried off high scoring honors with four field goals.

With Harris and Swift showing the way, Stewart Photographers defeated the Frederick (Md.) Eagles in a preliminary attraction, 23 to 19. Blethen and Hartman starred for the losers.

Maryland's Fate on Court Depends Upon Bob Gaylor

Chances for Successful Year to Be Dimmed If Last Season's Star Quits School, as He Contemplates Doing.

By JACK ESPEY.

ONE player—Bob Gaylor, husky guard or center from Hyattsville—represents the difference between a successful season or a fair one for Maryland University on the basket ball court this winter. Thus does Coach Burton Shipley, Maryland coach, regard Gaylor, who contemplates quitting school.

If Gaylor, who was

WEATHER CONDITIONS

U. S. Dept. of Agriculture, Weather Bureau, Washington, Sunday, Jan. 4, 8 p. m.

Forecast for the District of Columbia—Cloudy, followed by rain Monday and Monday night; Tuesday fair and colder; increasing southeast winds, becoming fresh and shifting to westerly Monday night.

For Maryland and Virginia—Cloudy, followed by rain Monday and Monday night; Tuesday generally fair and colder, except snow flurries in extreme west portions; increasing southeast winds, reaching gale force on the coast and shifting to westerly Monday night.

The disturbance that was central over northwestern Texas Saturday night has moved east-southeastward to Louisiana with considerably increased intensity, attended by rain in the Gulf States. The rainfall was heavy in portions of Louisiana and southern Mississippi. The lowest pressure is 29.58 inches at New Orleans, La. A disturbance of wide extent is central in the Gulf of Alaska, Cordova, 29.58 inches, and is causing general rains in the Pacific States as far south as northern California and southeast gales along the north Pacific Coast. Pressure remains abnormally low from Hudson Strait eastward over southern Greenland and southward to the Straits of Belle Isle, Newfoundland, 29.04 inches. An area of high pressure is moving eastward over the Plateau and Rocky Mountain regions, Modena, Utah, 30.48 inches, and pressure remains relatively high from the lower Mississippi Valley southward to the vicinity of Bermuda, Hamilton, 30.18 inches. Temperature changes have been slight, as a rule.

The Louisiana disturbance will move northeastward with marked increase in intensity, and it will be attended by general rains over the Washington forecast district within the next 24 to 36 hours. Following the passage of this disturbance colder weather will overspread all sections east of the Mississippi River. Generally fair weather will prevail Tuesday in Tennessee, Kentucky, the South Atlantic States, and the southern portion of the Middle Atlantic States.

Along the north Atlantic Coast the winds will be gentle variable, becoming southeast and increasing by Monday night, and another storm is overcast Monday. Along the Middle Atlantic Coast the winds will be increasing southeast, becoming strong Monday night and probably reaching gale force, and weather overcast, followed by rain beginning Monday afternoon and night.

Card Party Disturbed, Two Boys Are Jailed

Charged with disturbing a card party at the Silver Hill School, two boys were arrested yesterday and placed in jail at Upper Marlboro. They are Albert Douglas Wilson, of Washington, and George Day, of Oxon Hill.

They had riven to the school and were backfiring their motor, which gave rise to a report that a gun battle was in progress. Accused of being drunk and disorderly, they will have a hearing tomorrow.

CHRIST'S LIFE GIVEN AS MODEL FOR YEAR TO LIGHTEN BURDEN

MYSTERY OF FUTURE LINKED WITH DUTIES

The most effectual New Year resolution will be to take the life and works of Jesus Christ as a model and live with them always in mind, the Rev. Godfrey Chobot, pastor of the Sixth Presbyterian Church, said in a sermon yesterday. Mr. Chobot took his text from Hebrews XII:1-2. Part of the sermon follows:

"How quickly we have passed into a new period of time. How the hearts and lips have been full of kindly wishes for each other which this season brings forth.

"Through these earnest wishes our steps become firmer and the heart more courageous. We realize that life is a journey, for we have reached and passed one of its landmarks along the way, which reminds us of our pilgrimage.

"Wheels of Time."

"We plod along in our daily tasks, carrying the burdens, plucking the flowers, unconscious that we are journeying, or that life has an ending—so smoothly and silently roll along the wheels of time.

"It is true that the future is clouded in mystery, that God has mercifully hidden from us what its scenes will be. Even if you had the opportunity to draw back the curtain that hides from you the future, it would be best for you not to do it, and many of us would rather not do it.

"It is true that with all our wishing and planning it is an absolute certainty that the coming days will not be all sunshine, that all of our plans will not reach their expected fulfillments. This is the school of life, and there will be some hard tasks for us to learn, some burdens to carry that will be fashioning our eternal crown.

Duties Emphasized.

"But this mystery of the year does not relieve us of responsibility. It is just the opposite. With a high ambition controlling, and a determined purpose to make our lives count, we may cut through the heaviest storms and reach our desired haven.

"To live day by day, with a trust in God, to plan as regards His great purpose, that is to be your aim, knowing that God is on our side making all things work together for your good.

"What shall be our new resolutions as we stand in this gateway of 1931? There are many and many resolves that you and I could mention—but instead apply now the words of our text:

"'Therefore, let us also, seeing we are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, lay aside every weight, and the sin which doth so easily beset us, and let us run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus, the author and perfecter of our faith.'

Ideal Lies Ahead.

"What a challenge to us as we enter the new year. This text is an exhortation to that steadfast pursuit of the Christian ideal to which we are called by God in Christ Jesus.

"The 'cloud of witnesses' is chiefly that list of noble and heroic men and women mentioned in the eleventh chapter preceding our text. The good men and true who have lived and labored and suffered in the past appear to us 'as a great cloud of witnesses.'

"Again there is no doubt that the writer draws for his leading image a race such as the athletes of classical times used to run. In the amphitheater were crowds of spectators urging them on to do their best—'clouds of witnesses.'

Examples to Inspire.

"These two thoughts inspire us, the long list of godly men and women who lived through the ages, and the sense of our possessing a present trust—'seeing that we are surrounded with so great a cloud of witnesses'—to run our race with patience fulfilling our life's mission in devotion to God.

"The second injunction of the apostle is to 'lay aside every weight and the sin which doth so easily beset us.' The revised version in the margin has it 'all cumbrance.' That is, to unload ourselves of evil habits, to strip ourselves of, and set aside 'all encumbrance' that would hinder our progress.

"It is true that all of us have some evil disposition, tendency or influence which may properly be called our 'besetting sin.' Usually, because of its subtle and disguised character, it is difficult for us to find it.

Patience Urged.

"The apostle's third injunction is to 'run with patience the race that is set before us.' We all know that life is a race; that it is a stern reality; that it is a race for a goal. Some make it riches; some make it selfish pleasures. These and others may be right in their place, but wrong when made the supreme effort of life. God has placed before us a high ideal for character, a plan for the development of the whole man, and a 'Well done, thou good and faithful servant,' for the man who attends to all the necessary things in a well-ordered life, who runs the race with determination, with a steady persistency.

"Do not be a spasmodic Christian, zealous today and asleep tomorrow. But rather as followers of Christ, as those before whom God has set a goal resplendent in glory, take this whole year with all its precious days and lay it before Him.

Christ as Captain.

"The last injunction from the apostle is, 'Looking unto Jesus, the author and the perfecter of our faith.' That is, Christ, the Captain, the Leader, the Counselor, will go with us through the whole year—the 'perfector of our faith,' the one who has Himself reached the goal for which we are striving.

"I intended to have this morning's worship one of aspiration—not of retrospection. Our life lies not in the past. It lies in the future. Not in retrospection, but in aspiration. It is for us to learn how to let go of the past, 'forgetting those things that are behind, and reaching forward to those things which are before, I press on.'

"Yes, forgetting the mistakes and the sins, because when God forgives He also forgets. 'For Thou hast cast all my sins behind Thy back,' we read in Isaiah. Why should you and I remember when God forgets?"

HOOVERS AT OPENING OF FRIENDS MEETING

CROWDED TO CAPACITY

Many Government officials, members of Congress and persons in all walks of life, gathered at the new house of worship with the President of the United States and the First Lady of the land. Long before the service began, the building was filled to capacity, and hundreds crowded about the doors.

It was constructed as a national institution and wil be used as a meeting place by Friends from all parts of the country.

9 Civic Societies Assemble Tonight

Two Will Discuss Plans for John Eaton School Improvements.

The Cathedral Heights-Cleveland Park Citizens Association will discuss plans for further development of the John Eaton School at a meeting tonight in St. Alban's Parish Hall, Wisconsin and Massachusetts avenues. A program for the year will be outlined.

Eight other citizens' associations are scheduled to meet tonight. They are Dupont Circle, at the Mayflower Hotel; Forest Hills, at the Ben W. Murch School; Kenilworth, at the Kenilworth School; Manor Park, at the Whittier School; Sixteenth Street Highlands, at the Sixth Presbyterian Church; Washington Highlands, at the Congress Heights School; Takoma, at the Takoma Park Public Library, and the Progressive Citizens Association of Georgetown.

The Columbia Heights and Devonshire Downs Citizens Associations will meet tomorrow night, the former at the Columbia Heights Christian Church and the latter at 3923 Windom place.

Notables to Discuss War's Cause and Cure

At the sixth national conference on the cause and cure of war, which will have a four-day meeting at the Washington Hotel, beginning January 19, will be several notables as speakers, it was announced yesterday, representatives of the State, Navy and Commerce Departments and senators.

On the opening day a review of the last five years' work of the cause and cure of war committee will be given by its chairman, Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt. A review of 1930, as the year concerned peace or war, will be given by James G. McDonald, of the Foreign Policy Association.

CELEBRATION BEGUN AS WOMAN'S PARTY DEDICATES OFFICES

LEADERS TO INTERVIEW MEMBERS OF CONGRESS

Will Ask Early Passage of Equal Rights Measure; Banquet Tonight.

A two-day celebration was opened yesterday by the National Woman's Party, with ceremonies dedicating the Alva Belmont House as new headquarters of the organization at 144 B street southeast. The exercises will continue today, closing tonight with a dinner at the Washington Hotel.

Yesterday's ceremonies opened with music by the United States Marine Band and the National Capital Choir. Mrs. Harvey W. Wiley, national chairman of the party, made an address on the purposes of the exercises. Senator James E. Watson, of Indiana; Senator T. H. Caraway, of Arkansas, and Miss Doris Stevens, chairman of the Inter-American Commission of Women, also spoke at the ceremonies.

The house is the gift of Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, president of the Woman's Party, and has long been one of the historic show places of Washington. Following the unveiling of a bronze tablet bearing the name of the new headquarters, open house was held for members of the party and their friends.

Will Achieve Liberty.

In her address, Mrs. Wiley declared the new headquarters was the citadel of women's independence, and was destined to achieve the liberty of all women everywhere.

In his talk, Senator Watson pointed out that in this country women are possessed of a large and constantly increasing share in property ownership. They therefor, he said, have an immediate interest in economic problems. The first woman who spoke in public in behalf of equal rights for women, he declared, was from his own State of Indiana.

Senator Caraway, introduced as one "who has always stood for the advancement of women," stressed in his speech that women are no longer political outcasts, but have within their hands the scepter of authority. As long as one discrimination, one unjust law, remains on the statute books, he declared, they will dedicate themselves to fight for its removal. He predicted "the last shot to strike down injustice" would be fired from Alva Belmont House, from which, in 1814, "the last shots were fired by those who sought to defend the National Capitol from an invading foe."

Mrs. Belmont Is Lauded.

The exercises presented a colorful spectacle, as the purple, white and gold banners of the feminist forces gleamed, held aloft by more than 40 girl bearers in flowing capes. The banners were the same standards and streamers used in picketing the White House eleven years ago. The speakers stood in a second-story doorway above the mass of colors, and over a Nation-wide radio network lauded the leadership of Mrs. Belmont.

The ceremonies were concluded with the presentation of a $10,000 check sent by Mrs. Belmont from Paris, to be used toward the construction of an equal rights auditorium.

Today has been designated as a day for "interviewing members of Congress on the necessity of immediate passage of the equal rights amendment." During the day women will call on members of Congress urging passage of the measure, and tomorrow morning they will attend a hearing on the bill before the Senate judiciary committee.

Youth Seriously Hurt In Football Scrimmage

At Casualty Hospital he was reported to be suffering from concussion and shock, lacerations of the lower lip and possible internal injuries. His condition was reported to be favorable.

Overcoat and $21 Stolen.

Hugh T. McGarvey, of A street, near Fifth street southeast, told police yesterday that a man entered his bedroom early yesterday morning and stole $21 in bills and a blue overcoat. He gave police the description of a suspect.

FIGURES IN DEDICATION

WOMAN AID IN LAND OFFICE ASPHYXIATED

HONORED BY CONGRESS

Mrs. Viola Brockett Pugh, 57 years old, the only person in the Government Land Office who was authorized by Congress to sign the President's name to land warrants, was accidentally asphyxiated by illuminating gas yesterday in her Kensington, Md., home.

Patricia Pugh, her daughter, smelled gas and found her mother lying on the kitchen floor of their home. Dr. Eugene Jones and Dr. Katherine Chapman tried unsuccessfully to resuscitate her. A leaky jet was said to have been found on the kitchen gas range.

Mrs. Pugh was appointed to a position in the Government Land Office which was once held by her late husband, William B. Pugh.

Mrs. Pugh was a graduate of Central High School and the Corcoran Art School. She is survived by her daughters, Patricia Pugh and Mrs. Jack Hughes, and a son, William B. Pugh; two brothers, Paul Brockett and Bluford Brockett, and two sisters, Mrs. Clarence S. McLean and Mrs. Charles Muir.

Funeral services will be held at her late home at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. The Rev. Fred Kullmar, of the Warner Memorial Presbyterian Church, will officiate. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Two Men Injured In Crash of Autos

Resident of McLean, Va., Suffers Shock and Cuts in Accident.

Richard Payne, 20 years old, of McLean, Va., suffered cuts about the face and severe shock in an automobile collision early yesterday morning.

He was a passenger in a car driven by Herman B. Hodges, 22 years old, of Sparrows Point, Md., when the car collided at Seventh street and Rhode Island avenue northwest with a machine operated by Lawrence Hodkinson, of E street near Eighth street northeast, Second Precinct police reported.

Hodkinson was treated for bruises and went home. Payne remained at Freedmen's Hospital.

Child Saved From Fire As Sister Quells Blaze

Eight-year-old Semig Reines was rescued from flames which endangered him yesterday afternoon when his 20-year-old sister, Rosalind, put out a fire in a curtain with a pail of water.

The child, according to his father, Samuel Reines, was playing with matches in the bathroom of their home, 526 Four-and-a-Half street northwest, when he set fire to a lace curtain. The older sister, hearing the little boy's startled cries, ran to the rescue.

Teacher's Anniversary Is Marked.

The officers and members of the Men's Bible Class of Eastern Presbyterian Church yesterday celebrated the twentieth anniversary of their teacher, George H. Winslow. About 40 members of the local Kiwanis Club, of which Mr. Winslow is secretary, were present. David J. Roberts was chairman of arrangements.

Sleeping Man Robbed.

Joseph T. Simmons, L street, near Sixth street northeast, told police yesterday that his pocket was picked of $60 while he was asleep at a house on Three-and-a-Half place northeast. He gave police the description of a colored man whom he suspects of having robbed him.

RECORDS ARE BLANK WHEN HINTON LANDS

ANXIOUS INQUIRIES MADE

Failure of Washington-Hoover Airport to let its right hand know what its left was doing Saturday night resulted in a flood of anxious inquiries yesterday to The Washington Post about Lieut. Walter Hinton, reported missing on a flight between Farmingdale, N. Y., and Washington. Meanwhile, the famous pilot had landed, spent the night here, and taken off again.

After receiving a telegraphic dispatch telling of Lieut. Hinton's departure for this city, The Post attempted to check upon his arrival here. Telephone calls to all District airports, including Washington-Hoover, gained the information that their records failed to show his arrival. After verifying this by subsequent calls, The Post, accustomed to the precision of local military fields in reporting arrivals and departures of planes, accepted the information as accurate and carried a report based on records at the flying fields.

It was learned yesterday, however, that Lieut. Hinton landed shortly after dark Saturday night, on the Washington Airport side, and taxied over to the Hoover Field side for service. Apparently, neither he nor the mechanics on duty notified airport officials of his arrival. He came to the city, spent the night at the Chastleton Hotel, and took off again about 10 o'clock yesterday morning.

Man, 41, Is in Hospital After Drug Overdose

Thomas F. Wenner, 41 years old, of Decatur street near Sixteenth street northwest, was brought to Emergency Hospital early yesterday morning suffering from an overdose of a sleeping drug.

He collapsed at the First Precinct when he went there to report that he had fallen from a loading platform at Tenth and F streets northwest. His condition is serious.

Police Seize Man With Jars of Rum

Furnishes $500 Cash Bond on Charge of Illegal Possession.

Police Chauffeur A. D. Mullins and Headquarters Detective Howard went to a house on Fourth street near L street northwest yesterday afternoon in search of a man whom they believed to be concealing stolen property.

As they drew up to the house a Negro emerged with a large leather satchel on his back, Mullins said. Just for curiosity, Mullins asked the Negro what he had in the satchel. For answer, the Negro hastened to his automobile and started to drive off.

Mullins jumped on the running board, ordered the man to stop, and found seven jars of liquor in the satchel. The Negro gave his name as Francis J. Walsh, of Ridge street near Fourth street northwest. He furnished $500 cash bond at the Second Precinct Station, where he was charged with illegal possession.

Couple, Overcome by Gas, Revived.

Gas, leaking from what police said was an unknown source, overcame Henson Dandridge, colored, 43 years old, and Genevieve Dandridge, colored, 36 years old, of L street near Sixth street northeast, yesterday morning. The rescue squad gave them first aid. They remained at home.

OPPONENT OF 1916 JOINS TRIBUTE TO WILSON'S MEMORY

DR. JOHN H. CLARKE'S ORATION UPON LEAGUE

Holds War President One of Four Who Will Live Forever in History.

Shadows of the past were invoked at the National Theater yesterday afternoon as a distinguished audience gathered in connection with his birthday anniversary to honor the memory of Woodrow Wilson and to pay tribute to his crowning work, the League of Nations.

But the shadows were closely linked with the present and with figures of today as men who were closely associated with the World War president and who lived after him, some of them to attempt to carry out his main ideal, took a leading part in praising his memory and his works.

There was drama in the graceful tribute paid by Chief Justice Charles Evans Hughes, his opponent for the Presidency in 1916, who evidenced his respect by simple attendance, sitting with Mrs. Hughes well down in front and almost directly under the box occupied by the President's widow.

Maturity of Audience Noted.

Mrs. Wilson, attired in black, with a black velvet hat set off by a single simple ornament, attended the service with three companions, Mrs. Bolling, Mrs. Lewis Pennington and Mrs. Edmund T. Meredith, widow of the Secretary of Agriculture in Wilson's second Cabinet. She sat through the glowing tributes to her husband, listening with rapt attention and scarcely changing her position.

It was noticeable, too, that almost the entire audience was composed of persons of middle age and past, those who had lived through the stirring era when Wilson made himself a dominating figure in the affairs of the world.

Then Frederic A. Delano, chairman of the committee of the Woodrow Wilson Foundation of Washington, and former member of the Federal Reserve Board under Wilson, introduced Dr. James H. Taylor, pastor of Central Presbyterian Church, at the time Mr. Wilson worshiped there.

Greeting From Foundation.

Mr. Delano then read a message of greeting from the headquarters of the Wilson Foundation, signed by Newton D. Baker, and turned the meeting over to Dr. James Brown Scott, delegate to the Paris Peace Conference.

Dr. Scott traced the beginnings of an American idea in forming an organization to confer on international problems by drawing the history of an invitation by South American nations for the United States to participate in such a conference during the administration of President John Quincy Adams. He explained how Adams interpreted Washington's Farewell Address at that time to permit attendance at the conference. Delay in Congress did not permit the American delegates, finally allowed to attend, to reach the conference before it adjourned.

The idea of the conference was to for ma body which would permit settlement of international disputes through mediation, the speaker said. And in the present time, he declared, since Europe, with its plans for a United States of Europe and other ideals which are typically American, is looking westward for aid, it is almost impossible for the United States to refrain from participation in the problems of Europe.

Address of Former Justice.

"If it is good for us to meet and confer on these problems," he declared, "we can certainly do more good within than without."

"The world has taken Wilson into its heart," Dr. Scott asserted, "and some day the opinion of the world will prevail."

Dr. John H. Clarke, former Associate Justice of the Supreme Court, who resigned to work solely for the ideal of world peace and the League of Nations, declared that Wilson was one of four Presidents the world would always remember.

Washington would live in history through his leadership in the Revolution and his work in forming the Constitution of the United States, he said. Jefferson would be remembered because of the Declaration of Independence, and Lincoln, who wrote with his pen and his life the Emancipation Proclamation, would also live through the ages, according to the speaker.

"Again, after Lincoln's time, there came a period of 50 years of Presidents who will isurvive only in the pages of history books," the speaker declared.

Estimates Value of League.

"Then came Wilson," Mr. Clarke said, "with a wise, courageous and consuming passion for his fellow man and the peace of the world. In a real sense, he wrote with his life and his pen, the covenant of the League of Nations, and breathed the breath of life into the noble concept of world peace, which had haunted the minds of men and nations for centuries. He brought this dream down from the clouds.

Mr. Clarke said Wilson was as certain a casualty of the World War as any soldier who died on the battlefield, and he cited the Paris Treaty and the league covenant, the Locarno pact and the Kellogg-Briand Treaty as the outstanding results of the eleven years' history of the league.

If the league were to be disbanded tomorrow, he said, the Kellogg-Briand treaty would be the only document standing between the world and war The covenant would automatically be destroyed, and the Locarno treaty, is so bound up with it, that it would be destroyed with the covenant.

The League of Nations will never die, Mr. Clarke said, since this "convinced generation" will keep it alive and will teach coming generations to respect it. The league is 'the only means to redeem the promise that the World War would be a war to end all wars, he declared.

UNIVERSITY HONORS PEOPLE OF BELGIUM

ENVOY LUNCHEON GUEST

A full scholarship at Georgetown University for some Belgian youth was presented at a luncheon yesterday to Prince de Ligne, retiring Ambassador of Belgium, by the Rev. W. Coleman Nevils, president of the university. The luncheon was given as a farewell to the diplomat. He also received a seal of the institution.

The scholarship document authorizes Prince de Ligne to choose the student in Belgium. It was granted in commemoration of the Belgian saint, John Berchmans, who was a member of the Jesuit order.

The luncheon was given at the Leonard Calvert table, which was used for the first time since it came into possession of the university many years ago. At this table Gov. Calvert's councils deliberated and the first religious tolerance act in America was framed.

Those present, besides Prince de Ligne, were the Princess de Ligne, the Princess Antoinette de Ligne, their daughter; the Italian Ambassador and Nobil Donna Antoinette de Martino; Ambassador Tytus Filipowicz, of Poland; the apostolic delegate, Mgr. Pietro Fumasoni-Biondi, the Rev. Edmund Walsh and the Rev. Joseph A. Farrell.

COL. DANIEL L. TATE DIES AT WEST POINT

TO REST IN ARLINGTON

Col. Daniel Lisle Tate, 74, U. S. A., retired, of 2100 Massachusetts avenue, died at West Point, N. Y., Saturday after a short illness. Col. Tate was on a visit with his son, Capt. Joseph S. Tate, who is stationed at the Military Academy.

Funeral services will be held at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon from the chapel at Fort Myer. Interment will be in Arlington National Cemetery.

Col. Tate was born in Kentucky in 1856 and graduated from the U. S. Military Academy with the class of 1880. On graduation he was commissioned a second lieutenant in the First Cavalry. At the time of his retirement in 1920 he was colonel in command of the Fifth Cavalry Regiment.

The officer served in the Indian Wars of the early '80s, the Spanish-American War and in the Philippines. He was with the punitive expedition into Mexico in 1916 and 1917, and immediately afterward was detailed as inspector instructor of National Guard cavalry. Prior to his retirement he held a command in Panama.

From 1908 to 1911 Col. Tate was assigned as professor of military science and tactics at the University of Vermont. Since his retirement he has been a resident of Washington.

Col. Tate is survived by his wife, who was Miss Lidia Scranton, of Scranton, Pa., and his son.

Missourians Ask New Voting Law

The high cost of voting in their native State has led members of the Missouri State Society in the Capital to fire a mimeograph broadside at all Missouri legislators, urging support for an absolute voters' bill which will be brought up this month.

The society, in its message, points out thot there are 1,500 Federal employes in Washington, legal residents of Missouri, who have a right to vote there, but are disfranchised because of the expense of trips back and forth to register and vote. The plea points out that 35 other States have absentee voting laws to cover similar situations.

"The privilege of voting should not be denied us simply for the reason our official duties must be performed here. Our employment by the Government should not have the practical effect of disfranchising us. As loyal citizens we wish to vote and most of us can not do so now," the petition states.

Frank Pierce Rites Set for Tomorrow

Pioneer Capital Advertising Man to Be Buried in Oak Hill.

Funeral services for Frank Hutchens Pierce, who died suddenly yesterday morning at his residence, 705 Fourth street northwest, will be held at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon from the Hysong Funeral Chapel, 1300 N street northwest. Interment will be in Oak Hill Cemetery.

Mr. Pierce, a pioneer Washington advertising man, was born in Hebron, Ill., in 1864, the son of Benson and Esther Pierce. He came to Washington as a boy, and for 18 years was advertising manager of The Washington Post under the ownership of Beriah Wilkins. Later, he entered business for himself, and conducted a printing establishment at the time of his death.

He was a member and past master of Federal Lodge, No. 1, of the Masonic Order; past illustrious master, Council No. 1, Washington Commandery, and a member of Avenue Chapter, No. 10, Order of the Eastern Star. He is survived by his widow.

Einstein Selects California Home

Pasadena, Calif., Jan. 4 (A.P.).—Prof. Albert Einstein, who has joined a circle of the world's noted scientists to resurvey the universe, settled one problem today when he selected his home. Less than an hour after the German physicist made his choice he was settled at a desk, his mind wrapped in problems of interstellar spaces, which reach virtually incomprehensible distances.

With a dozen palatial homes at his disposal, he evidenced the simplicity he claims, and swiftly chose a modest seven room bungalow. It is low-posted, with a high pitched English type roof.

A life long friend of Frau Einstein, Mrs. Barbara Seibert, arrived to fill the house with flowers. The two women were girlhood friends in Bad-Schwalbach, Germany. With the house problem settled, Frau Einstein went shopping.

Woman Held in Man's Shooting

John Speaks, colored, 25 years old, of Carlins court southwest, was shot in the right side about 1:30 o'clock yesterday morning by Margie Davenport, colored, 42 years old, same address, Fourth Precinct police reported. Speaks was at Emergency Hospital in a serious condition. The woman was being held at the Fourth Precinct Station.

Man Removed to Gallinger.

Charles Hunt, 54 years old, of U street, near First street northwest, was taken to Gallinger Hospital yesterday from a cell at the Fourth Precinct, suffering from a lacerated eye. Police said that he received the injury when he fell while being placed under arrest on a charge of intoxication.

Tenth Street Grocer Robbed.

The grocery store of Morris Hein, 1410 Tenth street northwest, was robbed of $15 worth of groceries, police were told yesterday by the proprietor. A side window had been smashed.

Bill Is Planned to Permit Aged Man Continuing Work

Negro, 85, Would Add to 59 Years of Service in State Department; Secretary Stimson Asks Representative Fish to Introduce Measure.

(Associated Press.)

At the suggestion of Secretary Stimson a bill will be introduced in Congress to permit an 85-year-old Negro to continue his 59 years of service to the State Department as long as he is needed.

The bill will be introduced by Representative Fish, of New York, whose grandfather, a former Secretary of State, gave the Negro work in 1871.

The employe, Eddie Augustine Savoy, is a familiar figure around Stimson's office. His duties consist of announcing visitors who call upon the Secretary of State. He has demonstrated a remarkable memory for faces, names and titles.

Stimson requested Fish to introduce the legislation "as a kindly act toward a venerable public servant." He said Eddie had "an appreciation of the old-fashioned art of courteous service."
